Extradition Is Decided Upon; N. Y. Extortion Charge Waits.

New Gold Deposits Uncovered in Bank

Prisoner Oblivious to Future; Refuses All News of Case.

New York, Oct. 1 (U.P.).—Bruno Richard Hauptmann will be placed on trial in New Jersey on a charge of first degree murder in the death of the Lindbergh baby, it was announced today. District Attorney Samuel J. Foley, of the Bronx, will confer with New Jersey authorities tomorrow regarding extradition.

Foley said the conference will involve procedure to be followed in transfering the stolid German carpenter to Flemington, N. J., where the murder trial will be held.

The Bronx prosecutor announced plans for the conference after Gov. A. Harry Moore of New Jersey had said that his State plans to try Hauptmann before the extortion case in the Bronx is brought to trial.

Attorney General David T. Wilentz of New Jersey will take charge of prosecution of Hauptmann.

New Jersey Case Ready.

Wilentz confered with Gov. Moore and Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, chief of New Jersey State police, before announcement was made that New Jersey virtually is ready to take Hauptmann in custody.

At the same time District Attorney Foley explained that technical difficulties will prevent trial of the prisoner on the extortion charge by October 10, as originally planned. Foley has indicated all along that New York will not oppose a request for extradition of Hauptmann.

Gov. Moore, at Trenton, pointed out that trial of Hauptmann on a first degree murder charge in New Jersey would be the more reasonable procedure, rather than having him tried first for extortion in New York. Were Hauptmann convicted of extortion in the Bronx, the technical obstacles might delay his removal to New Jersey.

Bronx Panel of 200 Sought.

Anthony M. Hauck, jr., prosecutor of Hunterdon County, who would, under the present plan, be the attorney general's assistant in the case against Hauptmann, attended the conference in Trenton.

Selection of a special jury panel in the Bronx would delay trial of the extortion case, Foley said. He intends to go into county court Wednesday and ask that jury commissioners prepare a panel of 200.

Detectives who continued their examination of Hauptmann's home today found a New York auto license plate imbedded in the concrete floor of the house. The plate bore the number 5U2338 and was for 1932. It was taken to the district attorney's office.

New Deposits Found.

A second plate issued in 1931 bore the license number 7U5221. It was issued to Aunibaledi Luccia, of New York City.

Reporting on the check of Hauptmann's past finances, the district attorney said that on March 13,

Trial of Insull To Start Today

Fomer Utility Monarch Accused of $143,080,000 Stock Fraud.

Chicago, Oct. 1 (A.P.).—Samuel Insull, who once directed the largest utility system ever dominated by one man and possessed a personal fortune of $100,000,000, will go on trial tomorrow.

The erstwhile Midas of the Middle West will take his place at a huge table with directors of one of his 85 companies to answer charges of bilking investors of $143,080,000 through the sale of doubtful securities.

Preliminaries to the trial proceeded rapidly today. Sixty-six prospective jurors will report at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow to Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson; case 26900 will be called and lawyers will begin selecting a jury.

Insull, 74 and shorn of his power, was in seclusion tonight. "He's up to his neck in work," said his son, Samuel, jr., "and he doesn't want to see anyone. He wants to keep his mind on the case and nothing else."

Insull's son and 15 others, all blue book financial figures, will answer the charges with him. Twenty-five counts of a Federal indictment accuse them of selling worthless stock in the Corporation Securities Co. of Chicago, using the mails as a medium.

Stamina was listed as a prime requisite for jurors because it was estimated that the prosecution will require five weeks to unfold its case, and the defense may take as long.

Tears Get in His Eyes At Johnson's Good-by; Miss Robinson Quits

NRA Employes Advised to Have No Fear for Jobs.

Tears flowed from his eyes and those of many of his listeners yesterday as Gen. Hugh S. Johnson retired into the wings, never to appear again on the stage of the NRA.

The retiring recovery chief, whose duties will be assumed by an administrative board, cut short his prepared speech to some 2,000 of his employes because his emotion-choked voice would not permit him to continue.

Johnson was accorded a tumultuous ovation as the farewell party ended.

Standing alone on the platform of the Commerce Department auditorium, he lauded the NRA employes for their loyalty, hard work and devotion. He assured them they need not fear "drastic or sudden change" in personnel under the new set-up.

Roosevelt Praised.

Miss Frances Robinson, the administrator's secretary, heard the speech by radio in an anteroom.

The general made no direct references to reports of differences between the President and himself, but made several friendly comments about Mr. Roosevelt, once calling him "our inspired President."

"To all of you who have faith and loyalty to me," Johnson said, "there is nothing to apprehend in the reorganization of NRA.

"If you will examine it closely you will find that, from stem to gudgeon, it is composed by men

4 Hurt as U. S. Seamen Clash on Manila Dock

Manila, Oct. 1 (A.P.).—Four men were injured, two of them severely, in a waterfront fight tonight between union and nonunion crew members of the steamships President Hoover, President Hayes and General Lee.

Before police stopped the fighting, Joe Huilbert, 26, New York, and Edward Sutton, 35, both of the President Hoover, had suffered fractured skulls and other injuries.

Roth, War Flier, Dead; Gash on Face a Mystery

Chicago, Oct. 1 (A.P.).—Jimmie Roth, war-time aviator, was found dead in his bed in a hangar at Curtiss-Reynolds Airport today.

Roth, who was credited with 250 hours of flying time over enemy lines in the World War, had been employed as a private pilot. An investigation was ordered after it was learned that Roth had a deep gash on his face.

'No Place for Me to Stay Now', Declares Secretary.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Long the most influential woman in NRA, Miss Frances Robinson—"Robbie" to intimates—resigned yesterday.

The tiny, dark-eyed private secretary and administrative assistant to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson will return to private life October 15, the same day that her boss formally quits.

"I have resigned," she said.

"This is no place for me to stay now. I started with one man and I'll finish with him. I can't go on with anybody else."

Miss Robinson smiled like a schoolgirl about to go away on a vacation as she discussed her plans.

"I might become a colleague of yours," she confided, "and blossom into a writer for newspapers. In any event, I'll remain in Washington until November 1."

Self-Defense Denial.

She was asked about published reports that Johnson was resentful over the circumstances which led to his resignation and was planning, on her advice, to make a speaking tour of the country in self-defense.

"That's all a lot of apple sauce," she protested.

Meanwhile, Reuben Nakian, sculptor, announced he would make a bust of Miss Robinson to grace a group of notables, which already includes Johnson and Secretary Hull.

"She has the wisdom of a Portia and the devotion of a Ruth," he declared.

Miss Robinson, at a salary of Woman Riots Her Way Into Jail With Spouse

Tulsa, Oct. 1 (A.P.).—Rowena Bybee, 21, stormed her way into a sentence for burglary here today.

After the conviction and seven-year sentence of her husband, Ralph, Mrs. Bybee told Judge Clendenning she wished to plead guilty and obtain the same sentence. The judge deferred the penalty. Taken to the county jail she created such a disturbance that she was returned to the court where the sentence was imposed.

Sandlot Football Star Dies; First Victim in 4 Years Here

Football claimed its first fatality in Washington in four years yesterday when Wesley Stansbury, 23-year-old sandlotter, died at Emergency Hospital from a blood clot on the brain.

Stansbury was removed from a practice game Sunday after making a tackle. He complained of headaches and a slight dizziness when he was escorted to his home, 1628 Twenty-fourth street southeast, but was believed not seriously injured.

Young Stansbury was a star member of the Congress Heights A. C. team, a triple-threat half back, weighing 170 pounds. He had made a successful tackle of a Warwick A. C. ball carrier in the fourth quarter of the game at Fairlawn Field, Southeast, but teammates noted no injury at the time and he remained in the game for a few minutes until his dazed condition became apparent.

Doctors were summoned when he suffered convulsions early yesterday and he was removed from his home to Emergency Hospital, where an operation was performed a few hours later. He died at 4 p. m.

Unaware of the seriousness of Stansbury's injury, his teammates yetserday afternoon posted a challenge for a game next Sunday. All plans were canceled by his saddened mates on word of his death. The team will disband for the season.

In the same game, three of Stansbury's teammates also were injured. Two broken ribs, a broken finger and a broken arm were among the injuries.

RFC Eases Rates to Aid Bank Loans

Interest Cut From 4 to 3½ Per Cent for 5-Year Period.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

The Roosevelt Administration yesterday gave general business a pat on the back in the form of a reduction in the interest the Government charges for being a "partner" in the Nation's banks, trust and insurance companies.

Specifically, Chairman Jesse H. Jones announced that after January 1 until April 1, 1939, the RFC will require only 3½ per cent on all the preferred stock and capital notes it now holds or will acquire before the end of the year.

This action, which represents a cut of ½ of 1 per cent, was taken "with the approval of the President and to further encourage banks, trust companies, and insurance companies to lend in aid of National recovery on as favorable terms as are consistent with sound practice."

Announcement of the interest reduction was made by the RFC chairman shortly after an early-morning conference with President Roosevelt. It closely followed the latter's radio address of the night before, which has been interpreted in some quarters as an effort to reassure business.

Figures for last Saturday show that the RFC has authorized $1,161,879,000 for the purchase of preferred stock or capital notes in banks, of which amount $890,774,500 has been actually disbursed. Loans on preferred stock of insurance companies totaled $25,975,000 as of August 31.

Original Interest 5 Per Cent.

The original interest charged against the extra capital pumped into the banks and made available to insurance companies by the Reconstruction Corporation was 5 per cent. This rate was cut to 4 per cent on April 1, to last 5 years. Thereafter, the charge was to be 5 per cent again.

Yesterday's action not only reduced the rate to 3½ per cent from the first of next year to April, 1939, but it also lowered the charge thereafter to 4 per cent. In authorizing this, however, the RFC stipulated that these savings must be used in the retirement of the capital it has advanced.

Mr. Jones said that the interest revision, which is in line with the Treasury's efforts to lower charges on its own huge public debt, is intended also "to encourage the organization of trust companies specializing in mortgages"—a new venture launched only last week.

"There are a number of banks and trust companies," he continued, "that can use additional capital to their own advantage * * * These bank directors and stockholders should make every effort to provide the necessary new capital before December 31, this year, by which time we expect to complete our preferred stock purchases."

The RFC chairman also announced yesterday an offer for sale of 18 issues of municipal securities, aggregating about $4,000,000, which had been pledged as collateral with the PWA. This practice, authorized by the last Congress, permits the RFC to offer such securities whenever bond market conditions appear favorable.

Among the securities are an issue of $110,000 4 per cent electric light and power bonds by the town of Culpeper, Va., and $801,000 4 per cent bonds of the State Roads Commission of Maryland. Sealed bids will be received until noon, October 15, at the offices of the RFC.

Roberts Co. Blocks NRA In Code War

Only Trial Can Iron Out Conflicting Views, Declares Judge.

The Government's first attempt to force a Washington firm to live up to an NRA code of fair competition met with a rebuff in the District Supreme Court yesterday.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins, who made the ruling in the case of the NRA against the W. F. Roberts Co., one of the city's oldest printing establishments, in a memorandum opinion wrote that he would refuse to issue an injunction sought by the Government because, it alleged, the company was violating the code of fair competition for the graphic arts industry.

After first noting that the code actually had been approved by the President despite the absence of his signature, Justice Adkins held that the case made out by the Government and that by attorneys for the company were replete with conflicting contentions, which he could not dispose of without a full hearing.

Prompt Trial Urged.

For that reason, he said, "this case is an important one and should be tried promptly. I, therefore, advance it for trial and direct that it be placed at the top of the ready calendar whenever issue is reached on the facts."

"Defendant's contention that the National industrial recovery act is unconstitutional raises important Constitutional questions which are not free from doubt and which will have to be passed on by the justice presiding at the trial of this case, irrespective of my decision. Since the cause must go to trial as part of the relief sought, I think I should not at this time pass on these questions of law, but leave them all to be decided at the trial."

After citing the Wierton Steel Co. case, which involved a judicial interpretation of the NRA codes, Justice Adkins wrote:

"The application for preliminary injunction will be denied without prejudice."

Violation in Four Ways Charged.

The Government brought suit against the Roberts company because it alleged it was violating the code in four ways: It was not paying the minimum wage, the minimum overtime wage, was working its employes more than the allotted number of hours, and had failed to post in its workshops the code provision relating to hours and wages.

The company denied it was violating the wage provisions and that because it was engaged in an "intrastate" business, the power of the

Tatarescu Ministers Quit in Rumania After Row.

Foreign Minister Nicholas Titulescu provoked today's sudden crisis when he took offense because Tatarescu went abroad without consulting him. Tatarescu's cabinet had ruled since January 3.

Intimacy of a Prince And a Vanderbilt Told

Nobleman at Apartment All Day, Most of Night, Gloria's Nurse Says; Constance Bennett of Films Reported Visitor.

New York, Aug. 1 (A.P.).—Accusations of intimacy with "Prince Hohenlohe," dapper habitue of the Parisian boulevards, were made against Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt today by the portly nurse who has taken care of her daughter, Gloria Vanderbilt, 10, since the child heiress to $4,000,000 was 2 weeks old.

The accusation coupled with testimony about the life of wealthy Americans in Paris, startled the crowded courtroom where Mrs. Vanderbilt is waging a legal battle for custody of the daughter, whose father was the late Reginald C. Vanderbilt.

Mrs. Emma Sullivan Keislich, the nurse, told of nightlong cocktail parties, racy literature and the part the European nobleman played in the life of Mrs. Vanderbilt after the death of her husband, while she lived in France.

"Very often she was out all night," Mrs. Keislich testified. "That was her life."

"Who were Mrs. Vanderbilt's friends?" asked counsel for Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, paternal aunt of Gloria who now is caring for her.

"Well, there were Constance Bennett, the movie actress, and her South American man friend. Prince Hohenlohe was there all the time. Then there was a man from a hotel in Monte Carlo."

"To what extent was Prince Hohenlohe there all the time?" asked Mrs. Whitney's counsel.

"All afternoon and most of the night."

"Did you ever see the prince in Mrs. Vanderbilt's bedroom?"

"That's a very delicate question." Then she testified:

"I got up when Mrs. Morgan (Mrs. Laura Kilpatrick Morgan, mother of Mrs. Vanderbilt) awakened me and looked into Mrs. Vanderbilt's room. The door was ajar."

Mrs. Keislich said the time was between 2 and 3 a. m.

"What was Prince Hohenlohe doing?"

"He was beside her. He had on

A. F. of L. Opens Drive For Week of 30 Hours; Battle On Over Truce

Labor Returns Business Challenge for Trial Peace Period.

Secretary to Ask Federation Assent

Proclamation Is Sought; Employers Would Outlaw Force.

By Elliott Thurston.

Capital and labor, while applauding President Roosevelt's proposal for "a specific trial period of industrial peace," locked horns last night over the meaning of an industrial truce.

In the face of threatening complications over the interpretation to be put on the President's words in his Sunday night radio speech, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, after two conferences with Mr. Roosevelt, left last night for San Francisco to address the convention of the American Federation of Labor, now in session there.

Her purpose is to gain A. F. of L. backing for an armistice, the terms of which are already in dispute. She explained yesterday that she looked upon the proposal as one calling for increased resort to Federal and State mediation machinery while "reserving" labor's weapon—the right to strike.

Labor Challenged.

However, as spokesman for capital, the National Association of Manufacturers in New York issued a statement, pledging cooperation with the President, but challenging labor to accept a truce "in which neither group nor the Government will attempt to change existing relationships by force."

This drew an instant backfire from labor. President William Green of the A. F. of L. flung the challenge back to the manufacturers. The Associated Press quoted him in San Francisco as calling the manufacturers' challenge a "subterfuge" and adding:

"Let them first publicly announce they will obey the decisions of constituted authorities as the President suggested last night. They can issue no challenge to labor—they can make no protests—until they have first agreed publicly to abide by the decision of these constituted authorities."

Frank Morrison, secretary of the A. F. of L., was quoted by the Associated Press as asking, "What do they mean by a truce? Do they mean that the thousands of cases of discrimination shall not be corrected? Do they mean that we are to abandon collective bargaining? The President has asked us to proceed through collective bargaining."

Hold Right to Organize.

Likewise Francis J. Gorman, first vice president of the United Textile Workers and leader of the recent textile strike, declared here:

"Conditioned upon our right to organize freely, we agree to the proposal that there be a period free from industrial conflict. This will be nothing new for the United Textile Workers. We sought peace throughout. The record speaks for

Woman Arsonist Names Prisoner in Cleveland

Cleveland, Oct. 1 (A.P.).—A former fire insurance adjuster now in county jail here was identified today by Mrs. Bertha Warshovsky, confessed Chicago arsonist, as the man who paid her $250 to fire one of several Chicago buildings.

Mrs. Warshovsky said she was positive in her identification of Ellis Goldberg, 37, held on a charge of embezzlement. Goldberg also was identified by Jack Brown, indicted as the "torch man" in the series of fires.

Byrd Flier Hurt As His Autogiro Crashes in Gale

Little America, Antarctica, Oct. 1 (A.P.). (Via Mackay Radio).—The autogyro of the Byrd Antarctic expedition crashed here late yesterday shortly after taking off on an aerological flight, but without serious injury to the pilot, William McCormick.

The machine was wrecked. McCormick, a resident of Lansdowne, Pa., escaped with a broken left arm, minor bruises and a severe shaking up. After treatment he was resting comfortably.

McCormick took off during the afternoon on his tenth atmospheric sounding flight for the meteorological department. It had been cloudy all morning but the sky cleared and it was decided to make the flight.

At an altitude of 200 feet, the pilot encountered strong westerly winds. He decided not to continue the flight, turned around and swooped in for a landing.

The plane ran along the ground a few feet and the left ski tripped over a ledge of hard snow, lashing the plane over on its side. The left wing collapsed, and the rotor blades broke off as they thrashed around in the hard snow.

McCormick's left arm was caught under the plane but he was released quickly.

Admiral Byrd, on being informed at Bolling advance weather base of the accident, wirelessed McCormick: "Don't let the crash worry you. The only thing that counts is your safety. Very sorry you have broken your arm."

Treasury Acts For 'Secrecy' In Operations

Morgenthau Discontinues Weekly Reports on Fiscal Deals.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Reversing his former policy of keeping the public promptly informed of major fiscal activities of the Government, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., yesterday announced suspension of the weekly statement of purchases or sales of Government securities for Treasury investment accounts.

Instead of revealing each Monday the amount of Government bonds the Treasury has purchased during the preceding week, Mr. Morgenthau said that on the fifteenth of each month he will make public the net amount of purchases or sales for the preceding month. Thus there may be a six-week lapse between purchases and their reporting.

The reason assigned by the Secretary for the change in policy was that his reports on Treasury buying of Government bonds had received "too much publicity." He said that the weekly report of the Federal Reserve Board on the Government security holdings of the Reserve banks did not get the attention paid to his report.

Morgenthau's New System.

There is no difference, however, in the form of the Federal Reserve report and that of the Treasury inaugurated shortly after Mr. Morgenthau assumed office and now suspended. The Reserve System's weekly report indicates what amount of Government securities was purchased or sold within the week ending the day before the report is published.

Under the new plan announced

Jobs for All Declared as Goal by Green at Convention.

10,000,000 Held Idle Over Nation

Unemployment Greatest Problem, Is Word at San Francisco.

San Francisco, Oct. 1 (A.P.).—Organized labor's determination to bring about distribution of the avaliable jobs in America among "all those who are able and willing to work" was proclaimed here today by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in opening the annual convention of the federation.

The 30-hour week was envisioned by the gray-haired labor leader as one of the possible means of wiping out unemployment. Cheers rose from the convention floor as Green referred to it.

Confronted by many crucial issues and President Roosevelt's proposal last night for "a trial period of industrial peace," the federation began what delegates called the most important convention in its history.

Mr. Roosevelt's proposal drew a quick and generally favorable response from many labor leaders, but they gave no inkling of what the convention might do, if anything, about it.

Green's only reference to the President's proposal in his convention address was:

"It semes that labor speaks the same language as the President."

A drive for the establishment of the 30-hour week throughout industry by appropriate legislation was launched by the Federation's executive council before the start of the sessions. The council advocated a living standard which woud "use the capacity of our industries and the capacity of our man power."

Estimating the number of jobless in the country at 10,000,000, including about 2,000,000 holding Government relief jobs, Green said the unemployment situation was the greatest problem before organized labor.

Among other issues facing the convention was the question of readmitting the international unions of carpenters, bricklayers and electrical workers to the federation's building trades department—still unsettled after several days of preconvention battling. The dispute between the three unions and the building trades department administration has threatened to disrupt that branch of the Federation.

Single Union Problem.

The federation's attitude toward reorganization of the NRA, on the formation of single unions to embrace all workers in a particular industry as against organization by crafts, and on unemployment insurance remains to be determined.

Green said President Roosevelt's Administration had done much toward relieving unemployment, "but the fact remains that it has not gone far enough."

"It would have been better," he said, "that we never had a scientist or inventor than to have created a vast army of unemployed."

Green added the federation was not opposed to progress nor to the mechanization of industry, but to "the displacement by machinery of thousands of workers."

Recent strikes throughout the Nation were said by Green to have been caused "by hostile employers who refuse to permit their workers to engage in collective bargaining."

Citing a recent court decision which he said gave the right of employes to bargain collectively and to be represented by a union of their own choosing, Green said:

"Two days after the decision the National Association of Manufacturers advised its members to refuse to comply with the decision.

Strike Only Recourse.

"They refused to obey judicial, governmental constituted authority. I hold that any man or group that refuses to obey an order from the court of the United States is not a good citizen."

Referring to the right of labor to strike, Green inquired:

"What recourse has labor when

District Girl, Trying Suicide, Snatched From Path of Train

Two District detectives snatched a hysterical girl from death on the Railroad Bridge early yesterday, when she attempted to end her life beneath the wheels of an onrushing train.

Detective Sergt. Richard Cox and Detective Ben Johnson were assigned to duty on the Highway Bridge, guarding it against a possible attempt to cross by Legenza and Mais, the escaped Richmond slayers.

At 2 a. m., a taxi driven by Bob Rotert Robertson, of the 300 block of E street northwest, drove up. Robertson told the officers he had seen a hatless young woman on the seawall, ready to leap into the water.

The officers jumped in the cab and raced along the river bank but saw no signs of the girl. On their way back, however, they heard sobbing on the Railroad Bridge, and scrambled up the bank to investigate.

Across the tracks was stretched the girl, and about three city blocks down the bridge a heavy freight train was approaching. Sprinting to the girl, they lifted her from the tracks despite her struggles to wrest herself free.

The train was almost upon the trio, and they were on the wrong side of the bridge for a leap to safety. Holding the struggling girl between them, the detectives clung to an upright pole on the outside of the bridge while the train thundered by.

Cox and Johnson took the girl back to the Highway Bridge, where they questioned her. As they relaxed their guard, she freed herself and tried to leap from the span. A second time they saved her from death.

The girl, who said she was Evelyn Lockery, 23, a waitress in a Pennsylvania avenue cafe, was taken to Gallinger Hospital.

Police learned that two weeks ago a girl friend died after swallowing poison, and at about the same time Evelyn lost a job with the Census Bureau.

"I want to die," Evelyn told physicians at the hospital.

Rate Rise Asked For Railroads And Air Mails

Higher Operating Costs Necessitate Increase, Proponents Say.

(Associated Press.)

Organized and determined moves to get more money for air mail and freight carriers brought tales of woe and legal arguments yesterday before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

There were two separate hearings. In the one on the railroad's application for $170,000,000 in freight rate increases, commissioners were told that higher operating costs necessitated the raise. In the air-mail hearing, another group of commissioners heard Postoffice Department representatives argue that the ICC had no authority to change present contract rates.

R. V. Fletcher, general counsel of the Association of Railway Executives, which is handling the railroad's case, opened proceedings with the assertion that carriers "simply seek to be classified with industry generally and be permitted to advance the price of what they have to sell when costs which they can not control make such a course imperative."

Rail Costs Up $300,000,000.

Wage increases and added costs for materials and supplies bade fair to increase railroad operating costs nearly $300,000,000 a year, he said, although many carriers were unable to earn their interest and rental charges.

He was backed up in this statement by Dr. Julius H. Parmalee, director of the Bureau of Railway Economics, who said 67.4 per cent of the 250,000 miles of railroad in the country operated at a loss from January 1 to August 1 this year with an aggregate deficit of $99,000,000.

In 1932, he said, 68 per cent of the total mileage was operated at a loss of $153,000,000.

Dr. Parmalee testified that 26 Class I railroads, operating 40,565 miles of track, are now in the hands of receivers or trustees in bankruptcy.

While Mr. Fletcher and Dr. Parmalee were testifying in the freight rate case, Solicitor Karl A. Crowley was giving the air mail division Postmaster General Farley's opinion as to the new air mail law.

Contracts Held Binding.

Mr. Crowley told the commissioners that the department would contend that the present air mail contracts are binding on all parties and can not be altered until they terminate; that the act gives the commission power only to fix the maximum rates the Postoffice Department may pay upon awarding new contracts; that the maximum rates fixed by the commission will not affect rates in present contracts where the contract rate is lower than the maximum; that the Postmaster General has the authority to extend the presen contracts for an indefinite period at the rates now in effect.

M. J. Gormley, president of the American Railway Association, in his statement for the rail increase, said the ratio of freight transportation expense to total freight revenue was 30.1 per cent in 1933, the lowest for any year since 1920, when it was 49.6.

D. G. Lawrence, of the traffic organization of Eastern railroads, presented estimates as to how much added revenue each of the many items of proposed increase would produce. These showed agricultural products were expected to provide $18,790,377, including wheat, $4,102,152; corn, $2,583,153; flour, $1,727,574; animals and animal products, $12,224,449, including cattle, $1,778,382, and hogs, $2,950,827; mine products, $69,996,727, including anthracite, $11,293,498; bituminous coal, $46,167,468; coke, $1,834,696; iron ore, $3,789,398, and salt, $1,091,040.

Highlands Association Debates Traction Case

Discussion of the proposed transfer of ownership of District traction companies was heard at a meeting of the Sixteenth Street Highlands Association last night in the Brightwood School. The public utilities committee of the organization was instructed to attend the current hearings and act in the best interests of the association.

All officers of the association were reelected, including Dr. John P. Tuner, president; P. W. Nicholson, first vice president; W. T. Stoutamyer, second vice president; Arthur E. Mary McCormic Finds 'Ideal Man' for Husband

Chicago, Oct. 1 (AP).—Mary McCormic, the opera star, has found her "ideal man." Not only that, she's going to make him her third, and permanent, husband.

"No, I shan't tell his name yet," demurred the former wife of Prince Serge Mdivani, when she arrived in Chicago for an opera engagement. "And I don't know just when the wedding will be."

Harried Railroads Perk Up as Jesse Jones Comes to the Rescue.

By Raymond Clapper

THREE straws seemed to indicate yesterday that the wind is blowing—however lightly—to the right.

1. A disposition to go the limit in saving railroads from another trip through the wringer was displayed by Chairman Jesse Jones, of the RFC. He made a personal call at I. C. C. offices to get approval of a proposed loan of $6,000,000 to the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. The alternative was to refuse the loan and force a reorganization. Chairman Jones argued that the Government could well help keep the present setup going in the expectation that Congress might enact rescue legislation next winter.

This was cheering news for several other important lines, whose situation is so black that only a generous attitude at RFC can tide them over. Chairman Jones insists the Government runs little risk because not only are its advances more than covered by collateral but the Government makes a profit on the interest collected. One New Haven official spent a worried Sunday and Monday at the RFC waiting to see whether Jones won his point.

2. A disposition to help the bankers was indicated in the half per cent reduction of interest rates charged banks on preferred stock and notes held by the RFC. This gives them cheaper capital and, it is hoped at the RFC will encourage them to put it to greater use.

3. An instance of decentralization of Federal relief activities was indicated in the decision of FERA to go back to the system of allowing States to purchase and distribute coal to relief families this winter. Last winter Harry Hopkins tried to do the job through headquarters here, but it was slow, complicated and took a vast organization.

Word comes from Texas that Vice President John N. Garner is riding around his Texas haunts in a Model T Ford and not worrying about the New Deal, the campaign, or anything else more than 50 miles from Uvalde. When Mr. Roosevelt was a candidate for Vice President, he advanced the idea that the office could be made an important one if the Vice President were drawn actively into the Administration as an Assistant Chief Executive. But that was a long time ago. When Congress is in session, Vice President Garner mixes into a good many situations at the Capitol, always under cover, but his connection with the executive end of the Government is confined to attending cabinet meetings when he has to be in town to preside over the Senate.

Miss Frances Perkins had an unsatisfactory day yesterday. First she gave the press a lecture on the subject of persistent questioning. Then, on leaving the White House, the first woman Cabinet member encountered Chief Justice Hughes arriving to pay a Supreme Court courtesy call on the President. Miss Perkins nodded, but the tall Chief Justice failed to recognize the slight feminine figure in black and strode by. She looked around with an astonished little smile and scurried on to her automobile.

No one who was present ever will forget the throbbing scene when Gen. Hugh S. Johnson turned on the full tremolo stops and mustered himself out of NRA. Employes packed the Department of Commerce auditorium, filling every inch of aisle space, all of the balconies and overflowing into the corridors and adjacent offices. This was the setting in which for more than a year he had waged his many battles—where he took the stubborn steel executives, the belligerent labor leaders, and the critics of the Blue Eagle and fought it out with them in the saltiest series of running skirmishes Washington ever has seen. This was the scene of his early triumphs, where he predicted months ago that before he finished the air would be full of dead cats. Always before he was flanked on this platform by his applauding staff, his eager lieutenants who crowded close to his elbow to feed him with ammunition.

This time he was alone. The dead cats all had been thrown and the gallant general stepped forward to surrender his sword. His eyes were even more bloodshot than usual. His throaty voice had lost its sharp impulse of command. It sagged and seemed to echo the disappointment of a defeated leader. There was the barbed reference to the seven men who were to take his place, and the forgivable boast about the pile of letters which he said would bring tears to the eyes of a brass Buddah. Then a laugh and then a hush as he added:

"Now it is time to go."

At this point in ending his prepared manuscript he had copied the moving Biblical benediction:

"The Lord bless thee and keep thee. The Lord make his face to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee. The Lord lift up his countenance upon thee and give thee peace."

But he did not quote these lines. Instead there was a choking pause.

Then he said in a halting voice: "God bless you."

Morgenthau Moves to Shield Treasury Deals From Publicity

by Mr. Morgenthau, it would be possible for the Treasury, for instance, to purchase $50,000,000 of Government bonds today to support the market, but the fact would not become known until November 15, and even then might remain a secret if, in the meanwhile, the bond market strengthened and the Treasury sold later what it had bought.

The last weekly statement issued yesterday for the period ending last Friday reported that the net sales of Government securities by the Treasury totaled $1,204,000. It was the first time that a net sale had been reported. Mr. Morgenthau declined to discuss the reasons why the Treasury sold that amount of securities. He said the sale had been made "at a profit" to the investment accounts holding the securities.

Around the Treasury there was some speculation as to whether Mr. Morgenthau's announcement could be taken as an indication that the Treasury is preparing the way to make large purchases of its securities in coming weeks. None would confirm this possibility. Prices of Government securities yesterday were heavy and there is no doubt that if the prices start to slide the Treasury will use its investment account funds to stabilize the market as far as possible.

Purchases to Continue.

Mr. Morgenthau said it was not intended to cease purchasing Government securities for the investment accounts from time to time.

The weekly statement in which the Treasury purchases of Government securities has been reported also gives figures on silver and gold receipts by the Treasury in the preceding week. This information will be reported as usual.

During the last week the Treasury received, under the silver nationalization order of last August, 2,550,303 ounces of the white metal, bringing the total received to date to 90,969,584 ounces. Mr. Morgenthau said he believed that "practically all" of the monetary silver in the country subject to the August Executive order had been turned in and that not much more could be expected.

Saving on Silver.

The Treasury never made an official estimate of the amount of bullion silver in the country prior to nationalization, but unofficial estimates on Capitol Hill placed the figure between 150,000,000 and 200,000,000 ounces. Thus, if Mr. Morgenthau is correct, the Government has been able to take over all the silver in the country at much less expense than had been anticipated by members of Congress.

The statement also showed that since last December when the Treasury commenced paying 64½ cents an ounce for newly mined sliver 13,601,000 ounces had been received. It had been estimated that the Government would receive 24,000,000 ounces annually under the December Executive order.

Mr. Morgenthau declined to discuss the statement received last week from the Chinese government protesting against aspects of this Government's silver policy, although he conferred regarding it with President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

From China it is reported that the Nanking government is threatening to adopt the gold standard as the basis for its monetary system if the silver policies of other nations prove injurious.

Scuttling Own Party Charged To Roosevelt

(Associated Press.)

President Roosevelt's attempts to win support from individuals regardless of party brought from the Republican Senatorial and Congressional committee tonight the assertion that "the Administration is now scuttling the Democratic party."

Without arguing that the President is trying to build up a new party, a new G. O. P. committee booklet—third of a series assailing the Administration—added:

"That (scuttling) job has recahed the stage where the President refrains from using the word 'Democrat' in his public addresses, and where the Democratic national chairman, in addressing letters of congratulation to those who have been nominated for Congress, congratulates them not as Democrats but as supporters of the New Deal."

Quotes Smith and Davis.

Then to show what it contends "real Democrats think of the New Deal," the pamphlet quotes remarks by a number of individuals, including two former Presidential Democratic nominees—Alfred E. Smith and John W. Davis.

Quoting Davis as criticizing "bureaucrats," the G. O. P. committee said the "bureaucrats" have "done nothing to contribute to the upbuilding or the perpetuation of the Democratic party, * * * are aliens to the Democratic party councils."

"It is noteworthy that the Government has done very little to contribute to this Century of Progress, while on the other hand, much has been prevented, much has been twarted, much has been hindered, by the heavy, cold, clammy hand of bureaucracy."

"Winces at Party Name."

"Can any member of the Democratic party be unmindful of the fact that the Administration even winces at the party name, and manifests a reluctance even to call itself Democratic, preferring to make an appeal for indorsement, not in the name of the party which elected it, but in the name of the New Deal * * *."

Besides Smith, Davis and Colby, the following "real Democrats" also are quoted on various phases of the New Deal:

Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, Secretary of Treasury in the Wilson Cabinet; Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts, Senators Gore and Thomas of Oklahoma, Byrd of Virginia; Tydings of Maryland, Bailey of North Carolina, former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, Representatives Ludlow of Indiana, and Shannon and Claiborne of Missouri.

Roosevelt Proclaims Oct. 12 'Columbus Day'

By proclamation of President Roosevelt, October 12 was designated yesterday as "Columbus Day"—to be celebrated annually as the anniversary of the discovery of America.

Acting at the request of Congress, the President directed that the United States flag be displayed on all Government buildings on that day, and called on the people "to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies in schools and churches, or other suitable places."

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 1 (AP).—The Government's claim against former Gov. James E. Ferguson and Gov. Miriam Ferguson for $3,000 in income taxes for 1925 to 1928, was settled here last week "for a smaller sum," it was disclosed when the United States Tax Appeal Court convened here today.

R. P. Hertzog, special attorney representing the Government's Bureau of Internal Revenue, said an agreement was made with Ferguson here Thursday.

itself. We offered to use the machinery created by the Government in order to avoid conflict."

If Secretary Perkins' construction of the President's proposal prevails there would be no interference with the "right to organize," and the right to strike would be "reserved" if mediation breaks down.

The manufacturers' proposal, however, is for the President to issue a proclamation, as during the war, promising that neither side "would use the emergency as a lever for fortifying their position."

Mr Roosevelt is thus confronted by serious differences of opinion in going through with his plan to summon leaders on both sides for conference with him within the next month.

Employers' Stand.

The manufacturers' position, so far as the National Association of Manufacturers can speak for employers, was set forth in the New York statement, quoted as follows by the Associated Press:

"The manufacturing employers of the Nation have been and are now ready to cooperate with President Roosevelt in sound measures to restore cordial employment relations and speed economic recovery.

"The President will find employers willing to sit down with him, as he proposes, to devise means for ending the constant series of strikes which have been one of the major obstacles to recovery.

"In July, 1933, the board of directors of the National Association of Manufacturers sent to Gen. Johnson a memorandum recommending the issuance by the President of a proclamation similar to the following doctrine laid down by the National Council of Defense during the World War, and subscribed to by Samuel Gompers, then president of the American Federation of Labor:

"'Neither employers nor employes in private industries and transportation system should attempt to take advantage of existing abnormal conditions and the country's necessities to change existing labor standards in employment relations which they are unable to change under normal conditions.'

1933 Statement Cited.

"Soon thereafter, the Industrial Advisory Board of the NRA, composed of outstanding industrialists, signed with the Labor Advisory Board a joint statemenet which was heralded widely as embodying the patriotic principle of industrial peace under which neither employers nor employes would use the emergency as a lever for fortifying their position.

"Unfortunately, the statement of 1933 was not so accepted by organized labor representatives who signed it. None would contend that unionization of workers was more necessary to combat the depression than it was to win the war.

"But union leaders have gone ahead steadily, calling one strike after another with the sole objective recognition of their unions in which, by their own statements, less than 4,000,000 workers are enlisted.

"The President is assured that employers, with a large stake in recovery, are desirous of seeing this situation ended and they will cooperate to the fullest to obtain peace. They are ready to join, as the President urges, in laying aside the weapons common to industrial warfare, if they must be used at all, until the more normal period following the existing emergency.

"The employers of the Nation will welcome the proclamation of a truce period, similar to that during the war, in which neither group, nor the Government, will attempt to change existing relationships by force, and challenges organized labor to bring forth a similar acceptance from its convention now in session.

"At the same time we urge that in the formulation of any further legislation, consideration be given to the system adopted in Great Britain of making unions legally resonsible in every State for their acts."

The Manufacturers Association is affiliated with 38 State associations and professes to speak for 60,000 to 70,000 employers in nearly every line of industry.

As labor spokesmen see it, the manufacturers' terms would freeze existing relationships, incidentally blocking the President's special boards apponted to adjust questions of the "stretch-out" and other disputed issues.

The proposed armistice to end the conflicts which have retarded business and spread apprehension, overshadowed other aspects of the President's first "fireside talk" to the country since the end of the last session of Congress.

However, the speech stirred up a storm of discussion, with some groups complaining because Mr. Roosevelt said nothing about balancing the budget, stabilizing the dollar, and diminishing the huge volume of spending which many fear will end in collapse of Federal credit and resultant inflation.

Approved by Many.

So far as the country's response was noted at the White House, however, the speech drew an avalanche of approving telegrams and messages. A Presidential secretary said that of the first 600 telegrams received, not more than 5 or 6 were disapproving and that these asked why the President had not promised to balance the budget.

But as a rule the White House hears from the applauders rather than from the critics. It was said that among the many messages were several from heads of large business and industrial interests who construed the speech as "reassuring," one manufacturer announcing he had, as a result, decided to go ahead at once with building two plant additions.

The stock market fell off 1 to 3 points, which may have been induced in part by the fact that yesterday marked the beginning of complete Federal control of the exchanges. Nevertheless, there was evident disappointment that Mr. Roosevelt had not mentioned monetary-budgetry matters. Also some read into the speech a resolve to go on with the vast volume of spending, although a contrary intention had been indicated by Mr. Roosevelt only a few days ago.

Reassurance was derived by the manufacturers and by business generally from Mr. Roosevelt's assertion that the New Deal was not aiming at overthrow of political orthodoxy—that it stood for individual initiative and fair profits. Most of the comment agreed that Mr. Roosevelt had discussed the NRA realistically and with readiness to abandon features proved unworkable during the "formative" period. Much importance was attached to his questioning of the price-fixing and production-control features of NRA.

Relief Officers Answer Critics

Cite Closed Cases Replying to 'Racket' Charges in District.

Out of 19 closed cases selected at random in the Southeast branch office of the emergency relief division, Leroy A. Halbert said in a report to Miss M. Alice Hill, director, ten showed that "the man or wife, or both, had got jobs."

In six cases, Mr. Halbert reported, persons could not be located because of incorrect addresses or because they had moved without giving a new address and had made no further appeal for public aid. One woman, it was found, could be cared for by relatives. In another case a single woman's plea was combined with that of her mother when the latter applied for relief. In another case the man involved did not use his work authorization card and made no further appeal. "Perhaps," Mr. Halbert said, "he should be counted among those who got a job but this is not certain."

"This record," he concluded, "does not show any chiselers."

New regulations require welfare and relief officials to give an explanation of the reason each case is closed. Officials contemplate using this information in a monthly analysis for the information of the public.

Smallest Motor Inventor Seeks to Outdo Self

Philadelphia (U.P.).—William L. Brown, jr., 23, who invented the world's smallest gasoline engine, isn't satisfied. He is now developing a still smaller motor.

The motor which brought him fame and which is now used in model airplanes, weighs only 6¼ ounces. Equipped with the attachments to keep it running at 5,000 R. P. M. it develops 1-5 horsepower and brings its weight up to 17½ ounces.

Brown, whose father turned the invention into a commercial success because the youth didn't want the marketing of the small motors to interfere with his school work, has started work on an engine that will weigh only 3 ounces and develop 1-80 horsepower.

Braying Donkeys Routed Three Lions

Cape Town (U.P.).—Ambling happily along the road in his donkey cart, a native of Orjiwarongo, Southwest Africa, found three lions blocking his way.

Then with a fighting bray the donkeys charged. The lions stampeded in a panic.

There was no holding the donkeys, who charged just as long as there was any breath left in them. Then they ambled off again as they had been doing before.

Progressives Map Fight to Stay in Senate

By Robert C. Albright.

Fighting to preserve old Senate Progressive lines in the face of New Deal encroachments, members of the Senate's Progressive bloc up for re-election this fall are mapping an independent campaign for their own political existence.

Senator Lynn J. Frazier, of North Dakota, will fling down the Progressive gauntlet tomorrow in Hartford, Wis., in support of his friend and colleague, Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., it was learned last night.

Blazing a campaign trail that later will be followed by Senators William E. Borah, of Idaho; Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, and Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, Frazier will continue into Minnesota to aid Senator Henrik Shipstead, Farmer-Laborite.

Competition Is Warm.

The arrangement probably will prove reciprocal. The North Dakotan himself is opposed by a Democrat at the polls this fall, and despite his Administration leanings, competition is warm. La Follette and Shipstead have promised to come to Frazier's help if he needs them.

Members of the bloc are having little to say about their reelection troubles. Generally speaking, they continue unwavering in support of most Roosevelt policies, but are taking no chances on that allegiance carrying them through where the Democratic opposition has placed other candidates in the field.

This is the case in Wisconsin, where reorganized Democrats have nominated John Callahan, Milwaukee lawyer, despite President Roosevelt's inferential indorsement of Senator La Follette. It is the case in Minnesota, where Representative Einar Hoidale (Democrat) is running for Shipstead's seat.

It also is true in North Dakota and New Mexico, where Senators Frazier and Cutting find surprisingly earnest Democratic nominees already entrenched against him.

Nye North Dakota Bound.

First of the Progressive group to forecast a spread of the Wisconsin third party movement into nearby States, Senator Nye left Washington yesterday, North Dakota bound. He will make speeches in Detroit and Chicago on the way, on an entirely nonpartisan issue—munitions.

Back in North Dakota, however, Nye will get down to business and politics. He will have some nice things to say through the State for Frazier. Then, in the final week of the campaign, when speeches count for votes, he will enter Wisconsin.

Frazier will leave Washington for Wisconsin today. He will make his first campaign speech for La Follette tomorrow in Hartford, just outside Milwaukee. The following day, he will speak in Menomonie. From there he will jump to Minnesota.

Frazier Faces Opposition.

Frazier, who was never 100 per cent New Deal, but who went along with most of the agricultural program and had his bill for scaling down farm interest passed by a New Deal Congress, is facing real opposition at home.

His Democratic opponent is Henry Holt, Grand Forks printer.

Frazier doesn't underestimate his opponent, but he banks on his own battle-scarred two-term record as "the friend of the farmer" to pull him through.

Like most members of the Progressive bloc, Frazier has accepted as much of the New Deal program as coincides with his left-wing views, and has little to say about the rest.

More Radical Laws Predicted.

In an interview yesterday before leaving Washington, he was slightly communicative.

"We are going to get more radical legislation next session, if I read the signs," he said. "Farmers are going to insist on a further reduction in farm indebtedness, and a greater scaling down in farm interest. They want the President to use his inflation powers."

Although it was learned last night that Borah and Wheeler have promised to enter the Wisconsin and Minnesota campaign lists, speaking itineraries were lacking. Both Senators were out of the city.

V. F. W. Cheers Roosevelt Plea For Assistance

Patman Also Applauded as He Calls for Cash Bonus Payment.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 1 (AP).—From cheering an appeal by President Roosevelt that they cooperate to end economic distress, the Veterans of Foreign Wars today turned to applaud the demand of Representative Wright Patman, of Texas, for payment of the bonus and to welcome distinguished visitors to their convention here today.

Brig. Gen. Smedley Butler and Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, were among the guests.

The President's appeal was in a message read before the opening business session of the convention here in which he expressed his regret that he could not attend. Reminding that he, too, is a member of the V. F. W., the President said:

"Not since the gunfire was stilled * * * have you overseas veterans been confronted with emergency conditions such as today demand the undivided attention an unselfish application of all of us. And just as we did in those days, when we subordinated everything to the great objective, so now must we carry on through until we are definitely clear of the mine fields of economic distress * * *

"Many and diverse may be your interests, but greatest of all is that which we all share in common. It is the welfare of the Nation. That comes first. Let us look to that and the lesser things will follow in their due time."

The message was addressed to James E. Van Zandt, of Altoona, Pa., V. F. W. National commander.

Patman demanded immediate payment of the adjusted service compensation certificates, claiming that the increase in purchasing power would act as a powerful stimulant to prosperity.

Patman said he already has pending another bill for payment of the $2,200,000,000 to the veterans in legal tender United States notes.

He criticized the Federal Reserve banks as "a double-barreled compound racket" and said every official of every Reserve bank in the country "should be fired immediately."

Randolph congratulated the V. F. W. on its fight on communism, a "crusade" against which has been prepared for approval by the veterans at the convention.

Gallatin Fund Nearly at Goal

Plan to Place Statue on Treasury South Steps Proves Surprise.

Legislation introduced in 1927 will bear fruit next year when a statue of Albert Gallatin, Secretary of the Treasury from 1801 to 1814, is unveiled in the Capital, according to plans announced yesterday.

H. P. Caemmerer, secretary of the Fine Arts Commission, heard with surprise the news yesterday that the memorial committee intends to erect the statue on the Treasury building's south steps, alongside the sculptured figure of Alexander Hamilton.

"In 1927, after Congress authorized the statue," said Caemmerer, "the commission recommended it be located on the west steps of the Treasury, facing the east wing of the White House. Any change in this plan will have to be approved by the commission."

James H. Perkins, chairman of the board of the National City Bank of New York, and chairman of the Gallatin memorial fund committee, announced yesterday that less than $1,000 of the $35,000 necessary for the project remains to be raised. Serving with him on the committee are John W. Davis, Charles Evans Hughes, Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, Senators Glass and McAdoo, Jesse H. Jones and other national figures.

James E. Fraser, sculptor of the Hamilton statue, who has commissions on the new Supreme Court and downtown triangle buildings, has been retained to execute the Gallatin memorial.

Gallatin, a Swiss, had a colorful career as a member of Congress before being appointed Secretary of the Treasury by President Jefferson. Before retiring from public life in 1827 he served as Minister to France and Minister to England.

2 More Sought In Bribe Case

Mrs. Price, Chief Witness in Scottsboro Trial, Makes Charge.

Huntsville, Ala., Oct. 1 (AP).—Alabama authorities took steps tonight to bring into their custody two men held at Nashville, Tenn., on charges of attempting to bribe Mrs. Victoria Price, the State's principal witness in the Scottsboro case, to change her testimony.

Armed with information gained from J. W. Pearson, of Birmingham, arrested on a similar charge Saturday, Sheriff Ben Giles left for Montgomery to obtain a requisition for the two men.

They gave Tennessee police the names of Daniel Swift, a New York attorney, and Sol Kone, also of New York. They were taken into custody yesterday on instructions of Chief of Police H. C. Rakemore.

Pearson was arrested Saturday as he drove Mrs. Price on a highway toward Nashville, on a warrant sworn to by the woman. Pearson then swore to a similar warrant against Swift, and Jack Tiller, bodyguard for Mrs. Price, made an affidavit against Kone.

Mrs. Price told officers five weeks ago that Pearson offered her $500 to sign an affidavit repudiating her testimony in seven trials in the case.

Cane confessed the slayings while a patient in the veterans hospital at Little Rock, Ark.

Criticism of Any Delay by District Judges Unjustified, He Says.

(Associated Press.)

Chief Justice Hughes, reporting upon a conference here on senior circuit judges from the ten Federal circuits, yesterday declared that "any general criticism" of district courts for delay in trying cases "is wholly unjustified."

The Supreme Court leader, who presided at the conference held last week, reported that aside from bankruptcy cases there were 24 per cent fewer cases pending at the end of June this year than a year ago. The repeal of prohibition, it was added, contributed largely to improved conditions.

Conference Report.

The report declared the conference found the circuit courts of appeal throughout the country were continuing to keep up with their work in a satisfactory manner.

As for the district courts it was stated only where exceptional circumstances existed in certain districts was there undue congestion and delay.

The most serious congestion was reported in the Southern District of New York and the Southern District of California. This was declared due to the failure of Congress to provide a sufficient number of judges in those districts.

The conference urged that this condition be relieved by providing two additional judges for each of the districts named.

"It is of no avail," the report declared, "to multiply laws if the machinery of enforcement is inadequate."

Request to Congress.

Congress was requested also to remove existing restrictions upon the appointment of successors to various district judges in eight States, so that, should it be necessary, the President could name new men and make the judgeships permanent.

The judgeships, which, under existing law, can not be quickly refilled when vacated, are distributed as follows:

Two in Massachusetts, two in the Southern District of New York, and one each in the Eastern District of New York, the Western District of Pennsylvania, the Eastern District of Michigan, the Eastern District of Missouri, the Western District of Missouri, the Northern District of Ohio, the Southern District of California, and the District of Minnesota.

Normandy Town Turns Back on Coeducation

Coutances, Normandy (U.P.).—By unanimous vote, this town has taken a united stand against coeducation.

The reason for this action is that "male school teachers can not teach girls their future roles of wife and mother," and the that "children of France are disconcertingly precocious." To mix the sexes in public schools exposes them to grave peril.

Despite this anti-coeducational feeling in Normandy, there are 3,520 "mixed" schools in France. Wherever possible it is the principle of the French school system to keep boys and girls separated, but in the smaller villages it is difficult and mixed schools are established.

Regular Lines Over Sea Near, Air Body Told

Dirigible, Airplane Routes Soon to Be Reality, Bingham Says.

(Associated Press.)

The President's aviation commission was told yesterday that both lighter-than-air and airplane lines across the Atlantic and the Pacific were prospects of the near future.

Former Senator Hiram W. Bingham, president of the National Aeronautical Association, said dirigibles were better suited to ocean than overland flights. He advocated Government subsidies for establishment of such lines.

Howard E. Coffin, of New York, who was a member of the Morrow aviation board of 1925, said plans were advancing for construction of floating airdromes to be anchored in the Atlantic. The route would be via Bermuda and the Azores, he said, and added:

"Much the same thing will happen in the Pacific."

Bingham expressed his conviction that German trade had profited from the flights of the Graf Zeppelin to South America, and French exports from that country's African air line.

The former senator also advocated reduction of air-mail postage to 3 cents for single sheet letters and 2 cents for postcards.

Coffin, asserting there were insufficient pilots, said the Army aviation school at Kelly Field, Tex., and the Navy school at Pensacola, Fla., should exchange students. Even better, he said, would be the establishment of an air college, similar to the Army and Navy Academies at West Point and Annapolis, to train both civilian and military pilots.

Competitive bidding, he contended, "is out of the question in plane buying," and commented that in awarding air mail contracts on a new route bidders' "bench marks" should be considered.

He explained that he meant the Postoffice Department should be authorized to eliminate bidders unable to give adequate service.

Asserting that other countries maintained "active participation in missionary work" to further sale of their nationals' aircraft products, Coffin asked if the United States should be "the guardian of the morality and safety of the rest of the world."

Cooper Will Address Parent-Teachers' Body

William John Cooper, former commissioner of education of Montgomery County and now a member of the faculty of the school of education at George Washington University, will address the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Parent-Teacher Association tomorrow night in the high school. He will speak on the parent-teacher program for the coming year.

Thomas Pyle, principal, will discuss the present conditions of the school. V. T. H. Bien, a member of the building committee of the Parent-Teacher Association, will report on the progress of the Western Suburban Senior High School.

Maine's Shoreline Pictured on Stamp Put on Sale Today

The "rock ribbed coast of Maine" will make a new bid for fame today, this time in the form of a 7-cent postage stamp depicting a shoreline portion of Acadia National Park.

Latest in the series of parks issues, the stamp will be placed on sale simultaneously in Bar Harbor, Me., and Washington.

It has taken the area 330 years to achieve such prestige as may come from its representation in the mails. Champlain, the French explorer, discovered and named Mount Desert Island in 1604. The lands that now constitute the park passed through many ownerships the next three centuries. In 1914, 5,000 acres were tendered to the Government.

Two years later the gift was accepted and proclaimed Sieur de Monts National Monument by President Wilson. In 1919 the name was changed to Lafayette National Park, the mainland when Schoodie Peninsissippi.

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—A new, crepe suzette sort of recipe for making stronger automobile steel was reported to the American Society for Metals, which met here today.

Woman Who Fled Jail to Face Court

Mrs. Mamie Angel Will Get Hearing Today.

Mrs. Mamie Angel, 23, twice sought after eluding police, will be arraigned in Police Court today on charges of intoxication, disorderly conduct and leaving the scene of an accident.

Mrs. Angel, who lives in the 1200 block Twelfth street northwest, was arrested Saturday after her automobile was alleged to have injured John Petrello, 68, of the 600 block Second street northeast. Petrello, a fruit vendor, was struck as he pushed his cart near Third and G streets northwest.

During religious services at the House of Detention Sunday, Mrs. Angel, also known to police as Mamie Redmond and Mamie Graham, disappeared. She was rearrested early yesterday. Charges that she sped away after striking Petrello and was drunk and disorderly when police arrested her later will be heard this morning.

employers defy labor and deny the right to collective bargaining but to strike?"

Green said social insurance problems would be taken up by the convention and a program evolved.

The convention would demand National and State legislation prohibiting child labor, he forecast. It also would ask, he said, enactment of laws providing for compensation insurance and old-age insurance.

Expressing opposition to "subversive forces," he declared "communism in any form whatever" and fascism are enemies of organized labor.

Advising the convention to proceed with caution, Green said:

"Knowing our action here perhaps will have a profound effect on the economic and even the legislative policies of the Nation, we shall proceed cautiously, deliberately, exercising our best judgment."

Nurse Accuses Mrs. Vanderbilt Before Court

pajamas and she was in night clothes."

She said Prince Hohenlohe frequently read to Mrs. Vanderbilt and that she saw magazines with pictures of nude men and women in them tossed carelessly about the house.

Gloria was not in court. Mrs. Whitney was there, severe and dignified, garbed in modish black. She sat in the second row.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Consuelo Thaw, sat much of the time at a table with her attorney.

She listened eagerly to the testimony, pursed her lips frequently and occasionally tossed her head in emphatic gestures. She wept once or twice when testimony turned to her late husband, as did the nurse.

Attorneys said Prince Hohenlohe's first name was Frederick, and that he was 25 or 26 years old. Mrs. Keislich said he was practically "a member of the family," and that while Mrs. Vanderbilt was in Biarritz "he had a room on the same floor across the hall."

Mrs. Keislich wept in telling of illnesses suffered by Gloria from what physicians said was lymphatic gland trouble. She said Mrs. Vanderbilt was told to take Gloria to a warm, sunshiny climate, but that nothing was done about it.

The life of the family before Vanderbilt's death was described by the nurse as at times "very sad." She said he spent "a lot of time with the child and she wasn't there."

Concluding her testimony, Mrs. Keislich charged the life of Gloria with her mother was marked by "greed, managing and manipulating" because of the fortune the child inherited, but did not amplify her remark.

The testimony was before Justice John F. Carew, of the supreme court, who held on Friday that the burden of proof in the case was on Mrs. Whitney.

This ruling resulted in the testimony designed to show Mrs. Vanderbilt is unfit to look after the child's best interests.

Reginald C. Vanderbilt died September 4, 1925, a few years after he had married Gloria Morgan, daughter of Harry Hays Morgan, United States Consul General in Buenos Aires, and Mrs. Morgan.

Gloria has in income of about $116,000 a year, while her mother's income, according to data placed before Surrogate James A. Foley in February, 1933, is only $1,400.

Mrs. Keislich said she was discharged by Mrs. Vanderbilt on September 21, 1934, after she had acceded to what she termed Gloria's pleading and took her to Mrs. Whitney's studio in Greenwich Village. She said she "stayed on," however, at Mrs. Whitney's request.

Nathan Burkan, Mrs. Vanderbilt's attorney, characterized Mrs. Keislich as a "paid spy" of the Whitneys.

Twice during the week beginning September 16, when Gloria was visiting her mother, Mrs. Keislich testified, she threatened to jump out of a window if she couldn't "get away."

Mrs. Keislich described the incident related in her affidavit, filed last week, in which she alleged Mrs. Vanderbilt tried to teach Gloria to mix cocktails.

She asserted Mrs. Vanderbilt said: "'Come on, Gloria, I'll show you how to mix cocktails.'

"She taught her how to shake them. She poured gin while the child was there. She showed her how to pass cocktails around."

Burkan, after the court session, declared that tomorrow Mrs. Vanderbilt would present her side of the controversy and that the aspect of certain phases of today's testimony might be changed.

"I am going to ask Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney what kind of luck she had bringing up her own children," he said.

"I will show she was not so hot as a mother herself."

He mentinoed Sonny Whitney, Mrs. Whitney's son, specifically.

The Daily News says that Prince Hohenlohe's full name is Prince Gottlieb von Hohenlohe Langebourg, nephew of the Queen of Roumania.

One phase of Mrs. Keislich's testimony dealt with Gloria's finding a "disgusting" Parisian magazine with a symbol of certain rituals painted on the cover.

The nurse testified Gloria came running to her saying:

"'Oo-oo, what does this mean?"

Mrs. Keislich admitted in answer to a question by Burkan that she never complained to Mrs. Whitney about Mrs. Vanderbilt's alleged neglect of Gloria.

brought here by me and who are my friends, faithful and just to me.

"I will never raise so much as a little finger to influence them or anything about NRA—when you are out you are out. But I say to you in all earnestness that if I had full choice of them, I would not have known how to select better people."

The audience, including everyone in NRA from office boys to high officials, listened attentively throughout, especially when Johnson mentioned his successors.

Saddest and Happiest.

"I have just one parting request to make of you and if you love me as much as some of you have protested," he said, "I ask you to give to these seven men who have been selected to take my post the full measure of loyalty and devotion that you have given to me."

Of leaving NRA the general had this to say:

"This occasion is at once one of the saddest and one of the happiest moments of my life.

"Happy because we are looking back at a job well done and because for the first time in over 16 months I am free from tremendous responsibilities and killing duties. Nevertheless it is sad because it is probably the last time we shall meet together."

Johnson dismissed as "sentimental foolishness" suggestions that his friends should withdraw from NRA under the new regime.

Laughter ran through the audience when he commented that just before he resigned there seemed to have been "a regular last call for dead cats."

Editorials, telegrams and letters on his resignation, Johnson confided, "would bring tears to the eyes of a brass Buddah."

As he remarked, "now it is time to go," Johnson's voice broke. There was a long pause. Then came his final benediction:

"God bless you."

Shoulders erect, he strode from the room and returned to his office.

Johnson told reporters later he had received "a thousand offers," but was undecided what he would do after leaving NRA.

Asked whether he would be a candidate for the Senate in Oklahoma, he responded:

"I have had all I want of politics."

N. Y. Jobless Artists' Display Booms Village Hot Dog Trade

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Nick, the proprietor of a Greenwich Village frankfurter wagon, could not find words big enough today to express his enthusiasm for the third annual outdoor art show being held on the fences around Washington Square.

"It's wonderful, fine, very good, just great," he stammered.

Nick's liking for outdoor art has nothing to do with the quality of the 465 paintings on view. He likes the show because it brings crowds to the square, and the visitors, while looking at the pictures of the unemployed and struggling artists, buy his hot dogs.

"I don't know anything about the paintings," he admitted, "but every year for many years I see the artists. They are my friends. They work hard and have a hard time living. I work hard and also have a hard time living.

"The shows bring me big business. In one hour I sold 80 hot dogs. Like old times."

The artist told him the price was $40.

"That would cost me 1,000 hot dogs," Nick remarked. "I couldn't buy it, but I hope he sells it. I hope they all sell everything."

Center Cabinet Falls as Spain's Deputies Meet

Succeeding Government to be Similar to the Old, Premier Samper Says.

Madrid, Oct. 1 (AP).—Premier Ricardo Samper's centrist government collapsed today coincidentally with the reopening of parliament.

A wild scene in the Chamber of Deputies as one minister after another announced he was resigning was followed by the premier's hurried visit to President Alcala Zamora to present the cabinet's resignation. He then announced that Alcala Zamora would begin conferences with party leaders tomorrow preparatory to forming another government.

Samper expressed the belief that the new government would be based largely upon radical republican support somewhat similar to the old regime. He said, however, that some new blood probably would be infused.

The fall of the Samper government came five months and one day after it took power, a period marked by increasing charges that it was weak and vacillating in the face of emergencies.

The premier had refused to exercise the energetic measures which the minorities supporting him contended were warranted.

A crisis had been openly predicted for several weeks but, in obedience to Zamora's wishes to avoid its precipitation during parliamentary vacation, the cabinet was held together until tonight.

The Samper government was the tenth since the inauguration of the second Spanish republic.

Los Angeles, Oct. 1 (AP).—Federal Judge William P. J.

It was based on an article in the magazine allegedly referring to the treatment of Miss Ralston while Webb was her husband.

Hauptmann Death Trial Put Ahead

1933, when the Government called in gold coin and certificates, Hauptmann deposited $750 in gold certificates and between $500 and $600 in gold coin at the Central Savings Bank.

On the same day he exchanged $40, $170 and $370 in gold certificates for other money, Foley declared. It was recalled that Hauptmann insists he came by the Lindbergh ransom money after his friend, Isidor Fisch, had left it with him in a cardboard box. Hauptmann told police he did not know the box contained money until about four weeks ago.

The stolid German remained in his cell at the Bronx County Jail during the day, pursuing the usual prison routine. Jailers said he continued to eat regularly, though he still expresses no interest in newspapers. Guards said he has not looked at a newspaper since his arrest.

NRA Job Vacated By Miss Robinson

She has been much in the public eye since NRA was established. She accompanied Johnson on all of his National speaking tours. An "office" was installed aboard his trimotored Army plane so she could take dictation and transcribe his speeches in comfort.

When the recovery unit was in its formative stage she worked at the same killing pace as Johnson, often remaining at the office until the small hours of the morning.

Maid of all work, Miss Robinson's duties ranged from persuading the general to eat to deciding which of the countless daily visitors should be admitted.

The experience, she insists, "was worth $1,000,000."

339 Others Hurt in 634 Accidents Reported in September.

Washington's traffic deaths set an all-time record for a single September with 16 killed.

The death of John Mickens, 65, colored janitor of the 1300 block U street northwest, completed the month's death list. The previous record was 15, which has been equaled on several occasions.

According to police, Mickens was struck by an automobile driven by James A. Thomas, 24, colored, of the 2100 block of Newport place. Mickens walked from behind two parked cars into the path of Thomas' automobile, police were told. There were 634 automobile accidents reported for the month, resulting in injury to 339 persons, besides those killed.

The record was set despite the fact police have been conducting a concentrated safety campaign here since late in July, under the direction of Sergt. Walter H. Thomas. As an aid to this campaign the "Voice of Safety" was installed August 1.

"In no way do we consider the record breaking a reflection on the Police Department," said Thomas yesterday. "Statistics show that 11 of the deaths were due to negligence of the victims themselves, and the remaining five were held unavoidable.

"The safety campaign still is going strong and we intend keeping it that way."

Of the 16 persons killed, 4 were children from 3 to 12 years old.

French Claim Vaccine Against Yellow Fever

Paris, Oct. 1 (AP).—Discovery of a vaccine against yellow fever was reported to the Academy of Science today by Prof. Charles Nicolle, director of the Pasteur Institute at Tunis.

Experiments carried on by Dr. Jean L'Aigret of the institute, he reported, were extended into the French-African possessions, where 5,000 vaccinations already completed were so successful that the governor general made them obligatory.

$60,000 Loan Assures School For Alexandria

PWA Grants Request for Funds; Original Sum Not Enough.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

City Attorney Carl L. Budwesky, of Alexandria, was advised yesterday that the Public Works Administration has granted the new $60,000 loan for construction of the new high school building in Alexandria.

Under the original contract with the Government, Alexandria borrowed $300,000, of which amount $72,000 was an outright grant. After bids had been received and details for the proposed new school building worked out, it was found, this sum would not be sufficient to do all of the work contemplated, as a portion of this loan was for reconditioning the building known as the Klotz Silk Throwing Co.'s plant for use as a school for colored children. The additional amount was then asked.

The Alexandria Rotary Club will meet today at 12:30 p. m. in the George Mson Hotel, with President Lawrence E. Roland presiding. The club has members present from all parts of the country, last week the meeting being attended by members from Nevada, New York and Mexico City.

The adult night school, operated on Federal funds, opened last night, with classes for whites in the Alexandria High School Building, and for colored in the Parker Gray School. Three hundred and ten registered at the white school, and 142 at the colored.

N. A. Colosanto is general supervisor, with J. M. Yates principal for the white classes and S. W. Tucker principal for the colored. Teachers in the white classes are J. H. Garvet, Mrs. W. H. DeButts, Blanche A. Horner, Lucy J. Anderson, Marian C. Velke, Mrs. W. H. Brown and Mallory Hufty.

At the Parker-Gray school the teachers are Henrietta McCullough, Clara M. Lane, H. T. White, Lucille H. Schackelford, Frederick H. Rich and Julia Ford.

Elliott F. Hoffman, clerk of the corporation court, during August collected $1,005.38 for the State from marriage licenses, tax on deeds, wills and suits. During July and September hunting licenses netted $1,955.50.

The place of Louis Lyles, at 415 King street, was entered and robbed at an early hour yesterday morning, for the second time within a week. Policemen Brenner and Shaw arrested a man giving the name of Claude Meade, 23, who is being held for investigation.

Alexandria arrests last month showed a drop of 21 in the number of those for drunkenness, only 84 out of a total of 313 being for that offense.

The first Alexandria Parent-Teacher Council meeting will be held at 3:30 p. m. today in Lee school, presided over by Mrs. Wayland C. Kidd.

The George Mason Parent-Teacher Association will meet at 8 p. m. in that school. The Rev. George S. Vest and Irving Diener are expected to speak.

Holy Name Boosters Hold 2-Day Meeting

Nearly 200 members of the Boosters' Club of the Holy Name Church attended a two-day conference at North Beach, Md., over the week-end, as guests of the town's aldermen, Henry Glotzback and Harry Hudson.

Mayor Michael Lane greeted the organization Saturday, previous to an evening program of Irish folksongs and a travel lecture by John Casey.

After a communion breakfast Sunday, the club attended mass in a body and heard the annual address of the mayor. The Rev. John W. Dowling, pastor of the Holy Name Church and spiritual director of the group, was guest of honor at a luncheon Sunday. William J. Toomey, vice-president of the Holy Name societies of the District, was toastmaster. Albert Junghans, vice-president of the club, spoke at a banquet in the evening.

Private services were held for the family at 2 p. m. at Fort Myer Chapel. The body then was borne on a caisson to the grave.

Gen. Harries, who was the first commander of the Military Order of the World War, had been living in Los Angeles until about a month ago, when he came here with his family and close friends. He died of pneumonia in Waverly Sanitarium after an illness of three weeks.

"What a good-looking woman can do." This was all the speech left the Four Horsemen who compose the personnel of the Third Cavalry Fire Department at Fort Myer.

The phrase was emitted after the said personnel came from out of a stupor to realize they had subscribed for $15 worth of periodicals from a beautiful young woman magazine agent.

The confidence of the Prince Georges County Republicans over their predicted victory of Harry Nice as Governor of Maryland is almost equal to the Montgomery County Democrats' assurance that Ritchie is scheduled to hang his hat on the same peg for another four years.

The approaching State and county elections (to be patiently borne by Old Man Maryland next month) mean more to Rockville than just giving some politician a job.

Certain county commissioners charge that this high festive season has afforded the opportunity for one James P. Viers, a farmer and taxpayer, an opportunity to file suit against them for the return to the county treasury of some of their alleged high salaries.

The suit was filed against John B. Diamond, president of the county commissioners; Commissioner Robert D. Hagner, and J. Forest Walker, treasurer. The suit charges they received $1,900 too much. Mr. Diamond called the suit "a purely political move."

With Dr. Thomas E. Lattimer, of Hyattsville, again at the head of the Republican State central committee of Prince Georges County, the local Democrats are going to have to move a few miles per hour faster to keep abreast.

Suburban police have spent many an extra and weary hour watching for two week-end guests—Walter Legenza and Robert Mais—expected to arrive any time. However, the tri-State gangsters who shot their way to freedom from the Richmond Jail last week, haven't caused the suburban police nearly as much concern as they have one nearby Maryland resident.

The resident in question was in Slumber Land, shooting his way to freedom from the cruel clutches of the gangsters. So violent was the noise of the firing he hurled himself from his bed.

It was not pistol shots, but the sound of crashing glass, he heard. He grabbed a pistol that lay nearby, and rushed to the front door. The paper boy had hurled the morning gazette through a window pane.

Jury Is Completed In Surveyor's Trial For Girl's Slaying

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Oct. 1 (AP).—The jury was completed tonight in the trial of Robert Allen Edwards, youthful surveyor, charged with the "American tragedy" slaying of Freda McKechnie, his coal-colony sweetheart.

The twelfth man was chosen from a special panel of ten rounded up by a court official after the first panel of 80 was exhausted late this afternoon.

Mrs. George McKechnie, mother of Freda, sat in the rear of the courtroom. She was accompanied by several friends of the family.

C. H. Wilson Dead; Phone Executive

Official Began His Career 38 Years Ago.

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Charles H. Wilson, 73, for 19 years an executive of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., died yesterday of heart disease at his home at Mountain Lakes, N. J. He had been ill three months.

His work with telephone companies covered 38 years, beginning in 1881, five years after Alexander Graham Bell invented the telephone.

His most notable work was in connection with the development of long-distance lines and with the laying of underground telephone cables. He retired in 1919, after heading the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s long lines department since 1900.

Harris Is Granted Stay of Execution

New Appeal Planned in "Milsie" Henry Killing.

Charles Harris, convicted of the gangland slaying of Milton W. (Milsie) Henry, small-time gambler, two years ago, will not go to the electric chair October 11 the District Supreme Court decided yesterday.

Attorneys representing the condemned man asked for an extension so they could prepare an appeal to the United States Supreme Court and a new execution date, January 11, was fixed.

Henry was shot to death as he drew up in front of his Brown street home in the early morning. A large sedan that had trailed him from his gambling place drew up beside his car and its occupants fired sawed off shotguns, killing Henry instantly.

Court Orders Duncan Bonds To Be Settled

Amount Involved in Arlington Case Is $14,392.50.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Settlement of the bonds of former County Clerk William H. Duncan, now serving a term in the State Penitentiary for the misuse of county funds, and payment of other funds accumulated in Duncan's office for eventual settlement with his creditors, has been ordered by Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy. Th amount involved is $14,392.50.

The United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. of Baltimore, is ordered by Judge McCarthy to pay $8,533.34 and the Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland $3 300 to Harry R. Thomas, general receiver for the court, these being the amounts of the bonds up to the time Duncan was removed from office.

John A. Petty, present clerk, is ordered to pay $2,559.21, which was found in the office or had been collected, to the general receiver. The amount to be paid by Petty is subject to a deduction of 2½ per cent as a handling fee.

At the same time that payment of the bonds was ordered, Judge McCarthy gave the two bonding companies judgments against Duncan for the amounts to be paid.

The Court further ordered that Claude O. Thomas, one of the commissioners in chancery, examine all of the records with respect to funds handled by Duncan and determine the amount of money owing to the State, the county and private individuals to whom Duncan was indebted by reason of his office, the amount due to each, and to determine the manner in which the money is to be distributed.

Douglas Not to Speak.

Replying to a letter received from Arthur Orr, president of the Arlington County Civic Federation, to address that body at its meeting tonight at Lyon Park on the subject of the duties and compensation of his office, Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas said that because of previous engagements he would be unable to attend.

The invitation, coming at this time when there appears an open controversy between the three elected members of the county board and Douglas, indicates what is in store for the voters at the coming primary for county offices next August.

Douglas says in his letter: "However, I realize that the subject is one of interest to the people of the county, whose employe I am. In order that members of the federation may be informed upon the subject of your letter, I am inelosing copy of a statement which I recently made to the compensation board of Virginia, created by act of the 1934 General Assembly, to fix the compensation of the various attorneys for the Commonwealth.

"The compensation board fixed the allowance for my office. The action of the compensation board is set forth in its communication to the board, the pertinent portions of which are as follows:

Salary $5,000 a Year.

"In conformity with the provisions of an act approved March 29, 1934, known as the compensation act, you are hereby notified that the compensation board has tentatively fixed the salary of the Commonwealth's attorney for Arlington County at $2,500 for the six months period beginning July 1, 1934, to December 31, 1934. This is at the rate of $5,000 a year. This is the basic salary and the one-half payable by the State is subject to such cuts as have been or may be imposed by legislative or executive order.

"Conditions in Arlington County are unlike those in any other county in the State. In addition to the usual duties of an attorney for the Commonwealth in a county, the attorney is called upon to perform duties similar to those in cities; and the compensation board recommends that your board, in your discretion, allow the attorney such amounts for these services as you may consider fair and proper."

In giving his reasons for asking special compensation for his secretary and assistant, Douglas said:

"Conferences are held daily with heads of the various county departments. Am called upon to prepare and prosecute cases under the local zoning ordinance. Have to attend the county court daily. Have been called upon to investigate and prepare many papers in connection with the $2,500,000 sewer bond issue.

"The necessary duties of the office at this time cannot be properly be discharged without the assistance of a thoroughly competent secretary-stenographer and an equally competent legal associate, both of whom I am fortunate enough to have with me at the present time."

Girl With Bullet In Her Brain Plays As Doctors Marvel

Toledo, Ohio, Oct. 1 (U.P.).—A Mother Goose book interested 4-year-old Barbara Lois Lamont far more tonight than the fact that she is amazing Toledo medical men by living with a bullet in her brain.

Although today was the tenth since she was wounded mysteriously near her home, the child still showed no ill effects.

"It is an unique case, very rarely seen," said Dr. Wade Stone, attending physician. "The bullet struck her just above the left temple, coursed through her skull and brain. The fact that she is living at all is unusual, but she appears normal.

"We may have to remove the bullet. On the other hand, it may be lodged in bone and can be left there for the rest of her life."

Chaplin Is All Primed to Begin His New Picture Next Week, Title Unrevealed

Will Be Sound Film, but Sans Word of Mouth

Paulette Goddard in Role; Bert Wheeler Blows In; Amusement Chat.

By Nelson B. Bell.

After more than three years of inactivity, Charlie Chaplin is ready to begin work on a new picture next week. Like his last, the new vehicle for the world's greatest pantomimist will have sound but no dialogue—nor no monologue, neither.

As was published in this space many weeks ago, Paulette Goddard, Chaplin's constant companion and possible wife-to-be—if, indeed, they are not already married, as many on the Coast have professed to believe—will make her debut as a screen star in this film, for which, as yet, no title has been selected.

Henry Bergman, who has appeared in all of the Chaplin films made during the past 15 years, will once more be conspicuously cast. The personnel of the supporting ensemble has not been revealed. It may not even be engaged as yet. Chaplin is an impulsive fellow.

Burlesque Not So Easy.

While there will be no dialogue, in the usual sense, in the new picture, it is hinted that Chaplin has in mind some funny sound effects that will burlesque the articulate screen much as was done in "City Lights," his last previous release.

His task will not be so easy this time, however. Sound reproduction has been so perfected since Charles Spencer last had fun ridiculing it that he may find it a matter of some perplexity to kid it effectively again.

The screen, in case he hasn't noticed it, no longer mutters.

The latest melodrama to take the air is "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which will be broadcast from the stage of the City Theater tonight, when the Harriet Beecher Stowe perennial will be acted for the first time in the Capital since a time so remote that nobody seems able to recall even vaguely when it was. WMAL will pick up the first night performance at 10:15 o'clock. Previous broadcasts by WMAL this summer of the Roadside Theater's melodramas, "Murder in the Red Barn" and "Drunkard," elicited such favorable comment from listeners-in that NBC eagerly signed up "Uncle Tom" for an airing. To many who tuned in on the earlier broadcasts, numerous voices heard tonight will prove familiar. Frances Brunt, Eugene Kressin, Harold Stepler, Rose Scopp, Janet Coon, Walter McIntosh and other Roadsiders will be in the cast tonight.

Ben Bernie Picks 'Em.

It was a source of some surprise to several in attendance at the informal soiree thrown by Carter Barron in the handsome quarters of the Variety Club in honor of Ben Bernie Sabbath evening to learn that Maestro Bernie has Gracie Barrie, the gifted young singing comedienne who not so long ago repeated her earlier successes as mistress of ceremonies at the Earle Theater, under long-term contract.

In the shrewd view of Mr. Bernie, who is by way of being one of the most astute showmen now lending their talents to the enhancement of stage, screen and radio, Gracie Barrie is one of the most promising youngsters now before the public. In corroboration of this enthusiastic appraisal, he cites the fact that when Billy Rose was eased out of the Casino de Paree in New York, and the powers behind the scenes began to revamp the show, their single adamant stipulation was that Gracie Barrie must be retained.

"Discovered" Miss Colt.

Gracie will not be the first of the Bernie proteges to come along to stardom on the stage. It was he who fostered the first musical endeavors of Ethel Barrymore Colt, daughter of the distinguished actress.

He was also responsible for launching the professional career of Vivian Janis, who succeeded Jane Frohman in the Shubert edition of the "Ziegfeld Follies." There are one or two others, one is led to believe, whose abilities he now is estimating.

On November 25, Bernie and "all the lads" will be back in Hollywood, working on a new picture, "One Night Stand," in which Paramount will feature the band with George Raft, instead of Jack Oakie.

Likes King Voice.

At the moment, one of Maestro's major enthusiasms is John King, the young vocalist he picked up in Covington, Ky. John appeals to Ben, as he does to me, as an unusual prospect because he sings naturally, with an open throat and almost perfect tone production, instead of crooning through clenched teeth and constricted vocal cords.

Speaking of vocal cords, the Ol' Maestro is working under difficulties these past few days with a throat that is annoying him no end. Even the ample slab of limburger cheese and the bottle of Schlitz—with him sponsored by Pabst, mind you—served him Sunday night with the compliments of Winchell, didn't seem to do it much good!

Sidney Harmon and James R. Ullman have engaged Peggy Wood, last seen here on the stage in "Best Sellers," with Ernest Truex, and on the screen with Will Rogers in "Handy Andy," for the stellar role in "Sixteen," an English play by Aimee and Philip Stuart, which they recently purchased. "Sixteen" closed a five-month engagement in London in July. It will be the second production of the season for Harmon and Ullman, who are about to place "Waltz in Fire" in rehearsal for presentation late this month. Miss Wood, in the meantime, has left for a three-week visit to Hollywood. She will begin rehearsals in the new play immediately upon her return East.

Free-Wheeling Wheeler.

Prosperity and expanded leisure weigh heavily upon the energetic nature of Bert Wheeler, the forward half of the comic team of Wheeler and Woolsey, celebrated on both stage and screen.

RKO-Radio has just placed the team under a new contract for three pictures to be made over a period of a year and a half. Their "Kentucky Colonels" is completed and ready for release in November, so the studio will not require their further presence until January, 1935. This irks the nervous and vital Mr. Wheeler no little.

With time hanging heavily on his hands, he is gallumphing more or less aimlessly around all parts of the country except Washington. There is nothing aimless about his excursions to the National Capital, where he arrived last Saturday.

Bert Has a Reason.

Mr. Wheeler is apt to bob up in Washington 'most any old time, attracted by the charming personality of Miss Patty Parker, who on one or two occasions has caused a little perplexity in Hollywood by having been mistaken for Dorothy Lee, the stage and screen foil for much of the Wheeler and Woolsey clowning.

When encountered in Hardie Meakin's office in the RKO-Keith Theater yesterday afternoon, following his appearance as an honored guest at the Variety Club luncheon at the Willard, Bert was lugging around the original painting that adorns the cover of the October issue of the American Magazine. It is of an alluring blonde and a handsome young fellow, offering a modernized version of a certian Garden of Eden episode involving an apple. The blonde of the cover is Miss Parker and Bert would like to know who the boy is who has the temerity to steal the apple bit he has used for years on the stage!

Personally, I should think he would find it more convenient to carry a snapshot of her around with him.

May Go to London.

Irked, as I have said, by the imposed idleness of the new production schedule, Master Wheeler has in contemplation a four-week engagement abroad, beginning probably at the Palladium Theater in London, as a single act. Or maybe not that, either. It occurred to him while we were talking yesterday afternoon that Dorothy Lee is going to London soon, anyway, and that having worked together so much over here, they probably could throw together quite an act. He was to call her up in Hollywood last night to find out how's about it.

Also he has been solicited by Lew Brown for his new musical, to open in Washington before it goes into New York, and has likewise been sounded out by the Sam Harris office. But that would require even more leisure from the studios than that new contract provides.

Bert left Washington for New York last night, but will be back again in a week or so. More about this London business at that time. Or can't you wait?

Small Percentage of Writers Actually Get in Films; Margaret Lindsay to Be Opposite Cagney-O'Brien; News Notes and Gossip of Hollywood.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, Oct. 1.—One hundred and fifty writers have been doing the work of Hollywood—that is the work actually showing in completed pictures — since July 1. And there must be 1,000 or more in Hollywood. A bulletin issued by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, establishing credits for their contributions to pictures by the scribes, shows this, as pertains to released productions.

KATHARINE HEPBURN.

In the Screen Writers Guild alone there is a membership of 750 writers, and that does not comprise all that are in pictures. A number of writers are, of course, employed by the studios on a weekly schedule, but again more and more have entered the free-lance fields. The question arises: Is there a living in it for most of them?

A number of writers listed in the academy bulletin, which is a new phase of that organization's activities, only contributed to certain special sequences in pictures.

Margaret Lindsay With "Mariner."

Gloria Stuart enjoyed that honor in "Here Comes the Navy." Now it goes to Margaret Lindsay. Presumably there is a certain acclaim attaching to playing with that starring pair, James Cagney and Pat O'Brien. Anyway, Miss Lindsay is to appear with them in "Devil Dogs of the Air," formerly called "Flying Marines," and "Flying Leathernecks" and one or two other names. What difference does it all make?

The company is going to location at the aviation base at San Diego for about two weeks of shooting. The picture is to be fashioned along lines similar to "Here Comes the Navy."

Portfolio for Edwin Arnold.

With Arthur Byron and Janet Beecher already in the roles of Mr. and Mrs. President in the picture, "The President Vanishes," Edwin Arnold has just been elected to appear as the Secretary of War. This role will carry considerable of the drama of the production.

It is said that there will be no fewer than 51 sets in "The President Vanishes," which are being designed by Shavko Vorkapich.

In the cast, other than those mentioned, are Paul Kelly, Peggy Conklin, Sidney Blackmer, Osgood Perkins, Andy Devine, Irene Franklin, Douglas Wood, Rosalind Russell, DeWitt Jennings, Jason Robards, Edward Ellis and various others.

Old Timer Has Good Luck.

Usually it's the younger generation that succeeds to fame. This time it is a parent, John Considine, sr., father of the producer who bears his name. He is making his debut in "Evelyn Prentice," at M.-G.-M., playing the role of an attorney for the defense in the picture with William Powell and Myrna Loy.

The name of Considine is well remembered from old vaudeville days, when there was the Sullivan and Considine circuit. It is said that he is doing excellently as an actor.

William K. Howard is directing the picture.

Picture Pageant in Review.

Reginald Denny has just been assigned the rôle of the captain in "The Little Minister," with Katharine Hepburn and John Beal in the leads.

Henry Fonda, actor from the New York stage, has been engaged by Walter Wanger. It is his intention to appear in the footlight production of "The Farmer Takes a Wife" in the East this season, between film engagements.

Ruth Cummings, niece of Louis B. Mayer, has just had her first book published, called "Song of the Flesh."

Jean Parker may become a sparkler in a musical play. This is a new departure for the young Janet Gaynor type. Or is she following in Janet's footsteps? It seems, at all events, that Warners' has some intention of borrowing her for the feminine lead in "Gold Diggers of 1935," and in return M-G-M may secure Patricia Ellis for the football feature, "Backfield."

Predicted assignment of Lee Tracy to the lead in "Carnival" matures. He is to go into the production, which starts in about a week. Tracy is being borrowed by Columbia from Paramount for the duty. Ben Stoloff will direct the picture.

Take 'Em Off, We Know You!

This, ladies and gentlemen, believe it or not, is Mr. J. Paul Jones, a fellow in Paramount's "Here Is My Heart," who lost his job as a waiter and stuck on these Simon Legree mustachios and roached his hair to get it back again. Underneath the hirsute disfigurements, the keen observer may recognize the wide, kindly eyes and the general facial contour of Mr. Bing Crosby, the lad with the croon in his voice. Yowsah—as his friend, Mr. Bernie, would say.

Wreco Appeal On Levy Denied

District Court Sustains $60,000 Assessment for Bridge Cost.

Upholding the District Commissioners' assessment of approximately $60,000 against the Washington Railway & Electric Co., now merged with the Capital Transit Co., the District Court of Appeals yesterday ruled the railway company was directed to pay one-half the cost of maintaining the Anacosita Bridge by a 30-year-old Congressional mandate.

The assessment was made for work done between 1929 and 1931. When the railway refused to pay, the Commissioners first assessed the company and then issued certificates of indebtedness which created liens on the company's property.

The railway came into court and sought an order annuling the liens. The District Supreme Court, holding that the act of 1904 had been repealed by implication, granted the request. From that order the Commissioners appealed to the Appellate Court and obtained a reversal of the lower court ruling.

The case will now go back to the District Supreme Court, where it will be tried anew under the interpretation of the law as the Court of Appeals viewed it.

The Dramatic Society of the Jewish Community Center announces that the first meeting of its season will be held in the Center, Sixteenth and Q streets, on Thursday evening of this week, October 4, at 8:30 o'clock. All those desiring to become affiliated with this group may apply for membership by writing to the director, Miss Hannah Stolar, 1830 I street, or in person at Thursday night's meeting. The tentative plans for the season include two comedies, an evening of one-act plays and a serious drama.

Dots and Dashes.

Fred Marshall, Columbia Pictures' cheerful and cherubic itinerant publicist, is a Washington visitor in the interests of "One Night of Love," in which Grace Moore will be seen and heard on the Earle screen, beginning Friday . . . His first visit since "Lady For a Day," almost exactly a year ago . . . Theodore Tiller, jr., the Capital's preeminent young puppeteer, playwright and actor, another pleasant caller yesterday afternoon, full of enthusiasm over his summer with the Gloucester Theater up New England way . . . Also bubbling over with plans for the rehabilitation of his Shoestring Players this season . . . A talented and ambitious young man, the junior of the Teddy Tillers . . . The Wigs and Queues Dramatic Club of the First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O streets, will present "The Sunbonnet Girl," an operetta in two acts, at the Washington Heights Presbyterian Church, Columbia and Kalorama roads, October 12 at 8:30 p. m. . . . This morning at 11:30 the drama desks will be regaled by a private preview of "Outcast Lady," the new Constance Bennett picture, opening at Loew's Fox on Friday . . . This would be a new filming of Mike Arlen's "The Green Hat" . . . Or am I crazy?

Self-Protection Note.

Never mind answering that last one!

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker
(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

ALL indications point to a capacity attendance at the mass meeting of Government employes tonight at the Thomson Community Center to protest the impending dismissal of 1,800 Internal Revenue Civil Service workers under the McKellar rider to the emergency appropriation act.

BAKER

Among the labor and civic leaders who will address the gathering will be Brig. Gen. Samuel T. Ansell, attorney, and Miss Esther Penn, National secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Government Employes.

The majority of the imperiled employes are opposed to the furlough solution. They maintain the fairest method of handling the situation is to have R. F. C. funds allotted for their salaries until Congress can reconsider the act. Many of the workers will be subjected to an acute hardship if placed on a furlough of perhaps two or three months while Congress is getting around to hearings, debating and voting on repeal of that section of the appropriation act which deprives this group of their jobs.

However, they agree that furloughs would at least protect their civil service status and would be greatly preferred over outright dismissal.

Appointment of George H. Buckley, of Iowa, as assistant to Federal Housing Administrator James A. Moffett, effective yesterday, is announced at FHA. Mr. Buckley will be in charge of all administrative functions under Mr. Moffett.

New Sick Relief Group.

A new Government Employes' Sick Relief Association is being organized by Mrs. Maude Anderson (*), Internal Revenue, under auspices of the American Federation of Government Employes. The association is being formed "for the purpose of rendering financial assistance as well as ambulance service to its members."

It will be a nonprofit organization, Mrs. Anderson says, its officers and directors receiving no compensation for services rendered. The funds will be paid direct to the person who is ill, under the following arrangement:

Each member is entitled to $3.50 a day, not to exceed 30 days in any one year, if ill. If entering a hospital the benefits will begin from the first day and continue during the length of illness, not to exceed 30 days. If ill at home, the benefits will not begin for one week and then after that the patient will receive $3.50 a day sick benefits. No fractional part of a week will be considered. A doctor's certificate will be necessary for ill members remaining at home.

Ambulance service will be available for patients within a radius of 50 miles. The ambulances are said to be fully equipped with resuscitation apparatus and oxygen tanks.

Qualification for membership in the association includes up-to-date membership in the A. F. G. E. or American Labor Union. The association fee is $5 a year, payable in installments.

E. W. Osteen (), HOLC; James Flynn, Treasury; Walker F. Williams (), Justice, and we're sure many other Government employes, not yet identified, are among the freshmen at Columbus University Law School digging for their LL. B. this fall.

The Governmbent Clerk.

Like all such roads, it's rugged,
But the Government job's her nugget.
She's glad to hear the bell
And is not ashamed to tell.

She is a member of herds
Of whom some utter harsh words;
Complain of the lack of work
Done by the Government clerk.

She cares not what they say,
But does her part each day.
If they would only observe
They'd see she does deserve.

There're shiftless few in hives
And some in humane lives.
Why judge her by such few
And criticize as they do?

Labor Dispute Victories Told By U. S. Board

Clashes Involving 150,000 Steel Workers Settled in 3 Months.

The National Steel Labor Relations Board has proved to be one of the most successful of the several labor mediation agencies set up by the President, its report to Secretary of Labor Perkins revealed yesterday.

Covering three months of activity since its creation, the board reported that it had setled disputes involving 150,000 workers directly and many more indirectly and that no serious strikes have occurred in the industry since the board's establishment.

The most important case settled was that between the Republic Steel Corporation and its employes over renewal of wage contracts. Failure to settle this dispute, it was said, would have precipitated a strike affecting 35,000 employes.

The same personnel that composes the Steel Board was named only recently by President Roosevelt as a textile board to consider the serious labor problems confronting this industry.

Seven Other Settlements.

Seven other mediation victories were listed by the Steel Board in its report. They are:

Complaint of employes of the Apollo Steel Company, Apollo, Pa., alleging denial of collective bargaining rights and requesting an election.

Strike of employes of the Greer Steel Company, Dover, Ohio, based on a demand for equal distribution of work without discrimination against union members.

A similar request from employes of the West Virginia Rail Co., Huntington, W. Va.

Complaint of employes of Clayton Mark & Co., Chicago, charging that the company refused to deal with the union committee.

Other Disputes Ended.

Complaints of lodges of the Amalgamated Steel, Iron and Tin Association have been settled in all but one case without resource to an election, the report said.

The election, held by the employes of the West Virginia Rail Co. resulted in a substantial victory for Amalgamated.

Two cases are now under inquiry by the board, involving the Gilf States Steel Co., Birmingham, Ala., and the Warren (Ohio) plant of the Republic Steel Corporation, both of which are charged with discharging employes for union activity.

Judge Walter P. Stacy is chairman of the board.

NRA Is Blocked In Code Dispute

Government to regulate interstate commerce did not apply to it.

Lengthy arguments were heard by Justice Adkins, with Assistant United States Attorneys David A. Pine and John J. Wilson representing the NRA, and F. Regis Noel and Harry F. Grant, the company.

Pointing out that but a single instance of failure to abide by the code wage provisions had been admitted by the company, Justice Adkins further said that "from the evidence I am unable to find that defendant is violating the straight time minimum wage provisions. * * * I do find that defendant is paying one of its employes 16 cents per hour less than the minimum overtime wage fixed by the code, but I can not find that it is violating that provision of the code as to other employes."

"I do find that it is working some of its employes more than 520 hours in any 13-week period and is failing to post the code provisions in its workrooms," he added.

Lack of Proof Cited.

"Plaintiff's application as to the straight time minimum wage provisions therefore must fail for lack of proof. By this time I think all of defendant's employes must be aware of the code provisions applicable to them, and that plaintiff can not suffer serious injury between now and the time this case comes to trial because the code provisions are not posted * * *.

"As to other violations, working employes more than 520 hours in any 13-week period, and paying one apprentice for overtime work 16 cents less than the minimum code provisions, I am unable to find that the denial of relief until the trial occurs will work greater injury to plaintiff than would be inflicted on defendant if the relief was to be granted."

The opinion was construed to mean than the company, which has flatly refused to sign the code, can operate on its present basis until there is some court action against it. To permit it to do so, Justice Adkins held, would not greatly injure the Government, while it might injure the company. The full hearing will be heard within two months, it was believed.

Trade Upturn Is Near, Frederick Prince Says

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Frederick H. Prince, Boston financier, in an interview before his departure for Europe today, said he believed "we have reached the turn and the situation should be better from now on."

He expressed the opinion that no railroad receiverships are to be expected between now and the end of the year, and that in coming months constructive efforts will be taken which will considerably improve business conditions.

Radio Waves

By George M. Adams, Jr.

SOMEONE persuaded Ed Wynn, the fire chief, that his clear, tenor voice wasn't suited to the needs of opera. So when he and Graham McNamee unload on the air waves tonight for their first broadcast of the fall season at 9:30 p. m. on N. B. C., their mutual efforts to entertain will be devoted to "dramatizing" big news stories that lend themselves to the Wynn brand of drollery.

His familiar "SoooooooOOOOooo" will be heard less frequently this year, and the comedian states he will make no effort to popularize any new tag lines.

"If any phrase of mine catches the public fancy," says the fire chief, "and becomes popular of its own accord, that's another thing. But I don't intend to try to force recognition of a phrase."

Now that doesn't sound quite like Mr. Wynn . . . but if he continues to be as pleasantly goofey as before, he may be forgiven.

WJSV turned sleuth last night and planted mikes right on the middle of Highway Bridge as District detectives were engaged in the sinister pastime of stopping cars in a search for escaped members of the tri-State gang who skipped the Richmond jug last week.

"It was nice and dark and murderish," commented a member of the local C. B. S. staff who was assigned to shadow the police as they looked into lurking darkness of passing cars.

THE demure charm of Mary Pickford, America's sweetheart since the films first flickered, comes to the air waves tomorrow at 5 p. m. on N. B. C. networks with her radio debut in "The Church Mouse."

"There was something new and different about her which indicated her genuine happiness at entering into a new task and a new career," say those who watched her first entrance into N. B. C. studios on the coast.

"STRUGGLES With Monsters of the Deep" is the splashy topic of a program to be delivered over WRC at 3:15 p. m. today by Capt. Mike Dolan, local seadog who has been chief man on a whaling ship, a big league baseballer, international detective, movie star, stage entertainer and pianist. The local Moby Dick has just returned from a lecture tour in which he told whaling stories.

WHEN Arch McDonald, WJSV sports announcer, waxed poetic the other night, listeners liked his rhyming efforts so well they called in for copies of the verses. Arch left yesterday for Detroit to remain there for the duration of the "series." During his absence Warren Sweeney, smooth-voiced Moon Dialer, will read late dispatches from Arch over the latter's regular 6:15 p. m. WJSV spot.

Sample of the McDonald verse:

"From out of the West came two young Lochinvars — right-handers, might and strong. The brothers Dean—Paul and Dizzy, I mean. And the Cards they kept coming along. And just two days ago with the lights burning low, the public awoke goggle-eyed. To find with a start and a thrill in their heart —the Cards and the Giants were tied." For the rest of this, call WJSV.

Child Killed Obeying Mother.

Court Upholds Sale of House In Foreclosure

Miss Spruill Disallowed Counsel Fees, Damage Award Affirmed.

Disallowing an item of $2,000 for counsel fees, the District Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed in all other respects a decision of the District Supreme Court that the sale of the property of Georgia M. Spruill in foreclusure proceedings was proper.

Miss Spruill, acting as her own attorney, fought to save her home in court hearings that have lasted three years. She lost once in the District Supreme Court and was evicted from the property, only to have the District Court of Appeals order the sale set aside, with directions that the lower court try the case anew.

In the second trial, the District Supreme Court awarded Miss Spruill rental at $1,400 a year from November 4, 1930, to June 30, 1933, a refund of a deposit of $300 she had given when she sought to purchase the property at foreclosure, and punitive damages of $3,000, which included a $2,000 fee for attorneys.

Miss Spruill placed a $9,000 trust on her property in 1927. When it was about to be sold under the hammer, she sough to prevent the sale by applying to the court for a restraining order. The suit was dismissed when the holders of the trust filed a motion alleging her suit defectively drawn. This dismissal was set aside, but meanwhile, she had been forcibly evicted from her home.

Because of the eviction, the lower court in the second trial awarded her a total of $7,000. Both sides appealed this decision, Miss Spruill because she wished to have the trust declared void, and the owners of the trust because they objected to paying the award. However, yesterday's ruling confirmed the second trial with the exception of the $2,000 for counsel fees, which, the higher court said, were not properly levied as "punitive" damages to Miss Spruill.

Hartman Elected By School Group

Heads Franklin County Association.

Chambersburg, Pa., Oct. 1 (Spl.).—B. F. Hartman, principal of the Monterey School, was elected president of the Franklin County Education Association at its first fall meeting at the Pennsylvania Soldiers' Orphans Home, Scotland. He succeeds H. A. Grove, Greencastle, who was made vice president.

Huber D. Strine, Waynesboro, was elected secretary and Harold Conner, Montgomery Township, treasurer.

Plans were made for restoration of the 100-year-old Brown's Mill School as a memorial to the one-room schools of Franklin County. The Brown's Mill School has been replaced by an eight-room consolidated school. It is the oldest school building in the county.

Virginia Rail Denied Right to Drop Line

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday denied the application of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. permission to abandon its Craig Valley branch line in Botetourt and Craig Counties, Va., the Associated Press reported.

Objections to the application were raised by county authorities and others who declared the 26.41-mile line served a considerable population otherwise left without transportation.

Boy Auto Crash Victim In Critical Condition

Donald Cummins, 11, of 406 Hennegan avenue, Virginia Highlands, is in a critical condition at Emergency Hospital from injuries received last night, when he was thrown from his father's car as it and another machine collided on the Washington-Richmond highway in Virginia Highlands.

The car operated by Donald Cummins, sr., was in collision with another machine operated by Samuel Jordan, of Alexandria. The door of the Cummins automobile flew open and the child was thrown to the pavement.

Virginian Picks Bruno as Man He Spied Upon

Says 'Foreigner' and His Companion Spoke of Child's Slaying.

Danville, Va., Oct. 1 (Spl.).—An almost forgotten incident in connection with the Lindbergh case swept back into view here today when John C. Roach, 50, a peach grower, said that one of two men he saw and overheard in a parked green sedan on the side of route No. 29, 3 miles south of Gretna, "closely resembled the published pictures of Bruno Haptmann."

The conversation which Roach said he heard bore on the killing of a kidnaped child and Roach hastened to inform the authorities after walking a mile to a filling station and getting an attendant to drive him to the county seat to notify the sheriff.

In the files of a local publication dated May 23, 1932, Roach's version of the incident occurring on May 21 was found today.

Roach was in some pines running close to the Piedmont highway and was concealed when the green car drew up. In the car were two men, one heavy set with a strong foreign accent and the other of lighter build and a high-pitched voice.

The farmer said he heard the men say:

"I've been hearing that ever since we left New York. We're just as safe in one place as we are in another."

"If I'd known you were going to kill the baby I would not have got mixed up in it."

"Didn't you get your share of the split?"

The car was parked with headlights out but the interior dome light was switched on while the heavy-set man looked over some papers, apparently a map. Roach says that he was able to see both men clearly and that he has been struck with his memory of the face of the larger man and the pictures of the alleged Lindbergh extortioner.

Roach said the car was started when lights of an approaching car appeared in the distance. Roach said he could not reach a position to check the license number.

Two Flee Prison At Petersburg, Va.

Use Blankets as Rope and Slide Down From Roof.

Petersburg, Va., Oct. 1 (AP).—George Kelly, 45, and Ralph Moore, 35, Federal prisoners, were still at large tonight after escaping this morning from the city jail.

Brought here Friday in a group of 28 prisoners from West Virginia and Kentucky, the men were to have been transferred to the Federal prison camp in Prince George County this morning. Seven long-term prisoners from the group already have been taken to the camp.

Using blankets to fashion an improvised rope, the two men slid to the ground after getting out on the roof of the jail through a ventilator. Guards discovered their escape in time to prevent other prisoners from following.

Butter Spread Too Thick.

Two hundred unemployed seamen engaged in a battle with Baltimore police Sunday night, because they were refused second helpings of butter at supper in their relief headquarters. The incident has its amusing aspects, especially the exhortation of indignant speakers at a protest mass meeting to "stick up for your rights." But there is a serious side to this encounter which shows the demoralizing effects of lavish relief policies upon the recipients of charity.

The American people are moved by a sound and humane instinct to relieve deprivation to the limit of their ability. There is no public or private desire to restrict aid to a meager subsistence minimum. There is, however, a point beyond which it is impossible to go in providing comforts and luxuries for the unemployed. When second helpings of butter come to be regarded as a "right," denial of which justifies riot, the time has come to consider whether our relief policies are not producing a thoroughly destructive state of mind among the unemployed.

Already there is a disposition on the part of labor, both on relief works and in private employment, to confuse privileges with rights. There is a great deal of loose talk, for instance, about labor's "right" to higher wages and shorter hours, even under conditions which make such concessions economically impracticable. This attitude is not unlike that of the unemployed man who maintains that he has a right to be supported by the community in accordance with standards of his own choosing.

Both labor and relief problems have to be viewed realistically today. If any progress is to be made toward a solution of our economic troubles. Wages and hours have to be accommodated to what industry can bear, admitting, of course, that such standards may be higher than individual employers will at first admit is possible. Similarly, relief programs have to be adapted to the amounts that the community can afford to disburse, above the subsistence minimum. It is not improper to suppose that this limitation should come before the second helping of butter.

Boomerang.

Sometimes utterances that are supposed to annihilate an enemy are a boomerang. Happily this seems to have happened to the unfortunate clergyman who attempted to make an issue of an alleged "beer party" at the White House. Words he had perhaps thought could cause a sensation have been accepted by the public in general merely as another revelation of the lack of balance which characterizes the prohibitory mind.

During the late but not lamented Night Club Era the prohibitionists were forever issuing fanatical statements. Instead of helping either the cause of prohibition, or the more important cause of temperance, they reacted in a manner which would have shocked their originators, had their eyes or ears or minds been open to evidence. The ardent defenders of prohibition did more to end it than they will ever know.

The assertion that the White House entry "was piled with kegs of beer as the dancers drank to satiety" was typical prohibitionist propaganda. In other words, the truth was immaterial. The New Jersey conference had the good sense to refrain from accepting the charges made by the chairman of its board of temperance and deserves credit for promptly dissociating itself from an assertion which only discredited its sponsor.

Perhaps, even, the affair will have a salutary effect. It is a healthy reminder that there is always among us a certain type of individual who will stop at nothing to reorder the world in accord with what his limited mind thinks is good for it. Thank Heaven for our instinctive resistance to such reordering!

What, No Sea Monster?

It has been six months since we announced that these columns would be, henceforth and forevermore, "hands off" on the subject of the sea serpent, the playful, flirtatious monster that found, probably to his surprise, a champion in this page. No more, we solemnly affirmed, would we furnish clippings for his scrapbook or free promotion for his backers.

Much to our chagrin, we have found ourselves speculating as to his consistent absence from sight for lo these many months. Was he, perhaps, put out by the somewhat ruthless decision of this page to ignore him and his future activities? Is he hopeful that absence will make our hearts grow fonder? If so, he has succeeded beyond his wildest dreams.

Gradually he has become more attractive in his dignified aloofness than in his spasmodic appearances off various coasts. Without any consideration at all for his public, he has quietly and without ostentation gone back from whence he came. His decreasing personal appearances are slowly transforming him into a legendary figure.

We hope "dat ole debbil sea" isn't holding out on us. In spite of the movies just shown in London attempting to prove that the Loch Ness monster is but a large gray seal, we shall reiterate that we still believe, whole-heartedly and unreservedly, in sea monsters! If necessary, we shall advertise "Come home, Cadborosaurus, all is forgiven." Without him, this promises to be a long, dull winter.

The Report To The Nation.

No matter what their stature at inauguration, few men of intelligence and insight can go through the ordeal of the Presidency without growing to meet their herculean responsibilities. That Mr. Roosevelt is no exception to this rule was demonstrated by his radio address of Sunday night.

While this speech had both defensive and offensive aspects, it was in the main neither a reply to nor an attack upon the critics of Administration policy. It revealed, rather, an admirable effort to get more closely to grips with certain of our outstanding national problems. Undue light-heartedness, self-defense and justifiable sarcasm, were all carefully subordinated to the serious character of this report to the American people. This was not the speech of a party chieftain, but of a man weighted with, and conscious of the weight of, the burdens of our highest National office. It is as one above the battle of politics that our people like to regard the President. And it was as one above that battle that the President spoke in what was decidedly one of his happier public utterances.

This magisterial outlook was most pronounced in the current issue to which Mr. Roosevelt addressed himself most directly—the problem of widespread industrial unrest. His reminder that labor has the same right as management to expect statutory support in the development of self-government in industry was not at all superfluous, though it might have been observed that for both sides rights imply responsibilities which tend to be ignored. This, however, may readily be emphasized during the series of White House conferences which is promised in behalf of more effective industrial cooperation.

Quite obviously the President intended that his speech should be reassuring to business, and so far as generalities will assist to that end, he gave them. Much of the ill effects of the Green Bay speech have thus been canceled. The complete omission of any consideration of the all-important budgetary and fiscal problems was very marked, and not satisfactorily explained by the statement that "because of the shortness of time, I must defer a number of subjects to a later date." It is in this field that policy most needs definition, even though it is true that in this field it is most difficult for the President to define his course in advance.

In at least three places the President raised issues which he failed to meet squarely. In the first place he emphasized the importance of safeguards against speculation as a step "in the restoration of normal business enterprise," but attempted no explanation of why this move has protracted stagnation in the capital issues market. The case is not against the elimination of speculation but against the strangulation of recovery.

Later in the speech he replied to critics of the huge unemployment expenditures by asserting that no country "can afford the waste of its human resources." The truth of that nobody denies. But to state a truism does not meet the real issue in this field, which is that the future of this country is being mortgaged to the hilt by prodigal expenditure without stopping the waste of human resources. This, of course, can only be stopped by the revival of private business.

The reference to British experience provided the third case in which an important issue was not squarely confronted. It is undoubtedly true that if previous Administrations had been less backward in the development of social policy, less of a novel character would have been included in the New Deal. But we have the recent word of the President's Secretary of Labor that British workers are getting more security for far less expenditure than our Government is making. It must be realized that much of current criticism is directed not against the objectives sought, but the slapdash, inefficient and wasteful means which are adopted for potentially desirable ends.

Doubtless there was no conscious attempt at evasion in failing to meet the substance of certain very cogent criticisms. Certainly there was great polemical skill shown in quoting Elihu Root and Chief Justice White to answer criticisms which are of a clearly political nature. But the criticism which counts, the apprehensions which need to be assuaged, are not of this relatively superficial character. They must be met, even though they can not be disposed of quite as easily as the attacks of the prejudiced partisan.

A Contradiction In Terms.

Under the leadership of former Senator Robert L. Owen, a self-styled "Sound Money League" has been organized to work for the establishment of a central bank owned by the Government and "instructed by legislative mandate."

It is a contradiction in terms to associate sound money with a banking system under political domination. Those who advocate establishment of a central bank to replace the present system of twelve regional banks under general control of the Federal Reserve Board do not seem to be primarily interested in strengthening the existing credit-control mechanism. They are perhaps more concerned with making the Government the supreme dictator of credit policies and with attempting to place the delicate and intricate credit machinery of the country at the mercy of politicians. Unfortunately, there is good reason to suppose that the latter would use this power ignorantly, inexpertly and disastrously, to further ulterior ends.

Senator Owen denies that the type of central bank he advocates would be an inflationary instrumentality, but his denial is controverted by his accompanying explanation. He proposes, through the medium of the new central bank, to expand the demand deposits of private banks by at least $20,000,000,000, despite the fact that the banks are unable to employ their present resources effectively in making sound loans to private business. After this immense volume of deposit currency had been injected into the banking system by means not specified, it would be the duty of the central bank to stabilize the purchasing power of the dollar in such wise as to insure a steadily rising standard of living.

This is a counsel of perfection which is impossible of attainment under any known type of central bank—private or public—because of our imperfect understanding of the nature of credit and the effect of credit policies upon prices and production. If a Governmentally managed institution were to undertake the contemplated program of credit inflation outlined by Senator Owen, the purchasing power of the dollar might easily be destroyed before the attempted stabilization experiment could be inaugurated.

American Repertoire.

Mr. Gatti-Casazza, who not long ago announced the inclusion of a number of American-made opi in the impending Manhattan opera season, was roundly cheered for his decision. Now comes Dr. Serge Koussevitsky, his portmanteau crammed with several quite possibly startling European innovations, who announces, on his way to Boston, that his famous orchestra will play a number of symphonies composed upon these shores. His information is the more important, in the opinion of the able Francis Perkins, because Mr. Koussevitsky does not plan to stress American premieres so much as repetitions of American works which deserve rehearing.

This policy caused the New York critic to engage himself in some worthwhile research, with some results that should be of interest to the growing circle of aesthetes who have recently discovered the presence of the artist on the American scene. During the decade which began with the season of 1924, Mr. Perkins reveals, 227 works by 105 American composers were played in New York concerts. Of these, 55 works by 32 composers won their way to a second performance; 28 works by 18 composers were produced for a third time; and 12 works by 9 composers scored 5 or more productions. Most repeated was Ernest Schelling's "A Victory Ball," given 16 times; next was Deems Taylor's "Through the Looking Glass," with 12 performances.

The point of these figures is that there already exists among the moderns the nucleus of a standard repertoire of American symphonic music, which includes the work of Loeffler, Carpenter, Taylor, Gershwin, Hadley, Hill, Schelling, Griffes, Herbert, Mason and a few others. There exists a number of home-grown works which deserve "more rehearing than they have received; works which seemed to have more significance than could be fully disclosed in one or two performances—works to which due justice could be done only through a programmatic policy such as that announced by Dr. Koussevitsky."

It will be interesting to watch for these repetitions, for under the astute selection of the Boston conductor we may have revealed to us some exciting facts which, as Mr. Perkins says, will do much to take American music out of a "special class, requiring special propaganda" to give it a hearing. In a season which promises to bring us the musical combination of Igor Stravinski and Andre Gide and new works by Malipisro, Ernst Toch and Vaughan Williams, this particular attention to our own productions should be considered doubly appropriate.

Bread And Circuses.

Speaking before a great audience of farmers gathered to celebrate a national harvest festival, Chancellor Hitler asserts that the worst of the nation's troubles have been left behind and that Germany is stronger than a year ago. The oration is said to have aroused less than the usual amount of enthusiasm. If true, this is significant, for the reason that Nazi policy has favored the farmers above all other classes in Germany. But in any case a certain skepticism toward enthusiastic predictions would be expected from the evidence that the months ahead will be a period of growing privation for the German people, unless there is a radical improvement in their foreign trade relations.

At present, German trade with other countries is almost at a standstill because the import-licensing system is not in working order. Following the recently announced policy of limiting imports to amounts that can be paid for with exports, Dr. Schacht has been placed at the head of this system, which provides for complete government control of foreign trade. The plan went into effect a week ago, with 25 government boards supervising the distribution of imports. Allotments of foreign exchange by these boards to permit purchases abroad have been delayed. The effect upon business has been catastrophic.

Although the initial confusion will doubtless be overcome, it is evident that foreign trade will suffer severely from these restrictions, and that German debt-paying capacity will be further impaired. The control plan has also aroused commercial creditors of Germany living abroad to protest against the new regulations. Relations with Great Britain in particular are very strained, and negotiations regarding payments on past-due commercial accounts are now in progress.

With Germany's credit status constantly sinking, buying of essential raw materials abroad will necessarily be restricted to an irreducible minimum. Living standards will be further lowered as a result. Such a situation, as winter draws on, can not be obscured by displays of the swastika and military pageantry. Bread and circuses was the Roman formula for keeping a subject population quiet. But in that formula bread was the more important item.

"Problem" children usually are those whose parents set bad examples.

Race or Culture?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On September 3 Dr. Lothrop Stoddard had an article in The Post under the caption "Liberal Trend Seen in New Brazil Laws." The article was splendidly written, but Mr. Stoddard tried to show that Brazil because of its large Negro or mixed Negro population, was somewhat backward.

It has been my privilege to live all over South America, and there is not a single place in South America that doesn't have some of the same ills that Brazil has. This is true of Latin America generally. All of the South and Central American countries have very small percentages of their populations highly educated. Consequently, those who are educated get into politics and they, like politicians everywhere, live on the backs of the uneducated.

Most of the people in South America have what is known as a plantation culture, which is almost exactly like the plantation culture in Southern United States. Everyone knows that the people in Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, Arkansas and Mississippi, and more especially Louisiana, have a different culture from the people in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maine, Massachusetts and New Hampshire. Mr. Stoddard should know that every election in any one of the Southern States carries with it bloodshed. That is to say, white people are killed by white people. Very few Negroes can vote in the South.

One wonders if Mr. Stoddard knows this, and if he does, will he say that Brazil, with its so-called Negro population, is ignorant, any more than Georgia and the other Southern States, especially Louisiana, where Huey P. Long and Mayor Walmsley of New Orleans are at daggers' points. Both of these gentlemen belong to the Anglo-Saxon race. One wonders how Mr. Stoddard will explain their activities.

It is singular that white people can not write coolly, calmly and dispassionately about reconstruction days, when, as a matter of fact, Negroes who were in the law-making body during that period were as intelligent as the whites.

The lawmakers in the National Government and in the States are not any too intelligent now, and they certainly do not make the best laws. It is not due to the fact that colored people are hampering them. One wonders why these superior lawmakers, as Mr. Stoddard would have us believe, make such blunders. L. F. COLES.

New York, Sept. 10.

Are We Too Frivolous?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Italian and German governments, still far behind the Scandinavians, are yet doing good work in the way of keeping more women in their God-assigned place, which is their home, and not the arena of strife and struggle. When the wisdom of this plan of making it possible for women to stay at home is seen, not only more men will be put to work, but there will be no need of college students organizing "bug chasing squads" or others making silly noises on the radio, calling it singing, crooning or crying. They will all take life seriously, work like men, and help their wives to keep up their homes.

Why should it be said that the schools are producing a generation of frivolous, pedantic men and women? Why can we not emulate the character of the model American—George Washington? If all the schools and colleges of the country taught no other literature than that of the life of that noble man, general, husband, employer and true aristocrat, this Nation would not only become great once more, but would raise the standard of manhood, culture and civilization of the whole world.

What we need today is a more serious outlook upon life and our individual responsibilities toward one another. If we do not heed these demands, and let conditions continue, the problem of mental sanity or soundness will become universal in the land.

C. PHILIPS.

Washington, Sept. 27.

Nazi Terror.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter of Herr Basedow is almost equal to the amusing article by Herr Kruppa, that Herr Basedow objects to. Herr Kruppa insists the Nazi have never fatally injured the Jews, and Herr Basedow is naive enough to wonder why Americans boycott German goods. To refute Herr Kruppa in regard to the Nazi terror, and to show Herr Basedow why we boycott German goods, let us take one case from the hundreds of cases of Nazi murder and torture that the living have brought with them or smuggled by friends out of the torture-chamber that is Germany.

On November 15, 1933, the talented actor from the Staatstheater, Hans Otto, was arrested by one S. S. Sturmfuhrer and three S. S. men. Ten days later Hans Otto was taken to the hospital entirely disfigured and with a fractured head. Hans Otto died from his injuries. His murder is only one of many.

The historic burning of books was merely a prelude to the existing Nazi terror that Herr Kruppa denies, and that Herr Basedow dismisses with a shrug. It is not necessary for The Post to listen to these pro-Nazi writers to learn the truth; there are plenty of German artists and workers in exile who will be glad to answer Herr Kruppa and Herr Basedow. Let the murdered, the tortured and the exiled German men-of-letters speak the truth about Germany.

I am sure the cultured German would no more expect the Nazi to represent the best of Germany than the cultured American would expect the Silver Shirts or the Ku Klux Klan to represent the best of America. JOHN C. ROGERS.

Alexandria, Va., Sept. 9.

Why Not Bonds?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For the last 50 years there have been many ideas advanced which we thought were all out of reason by people who were supposed to be rather queer, but these same suggestions have been adopted in many instances and found to be sound.

At this time there is quite a lot of talk about inflation. I have talked with many men in business and out, who are afraid that inflation may come and they do not know whether to stay in business or not.

Did it ever occur to you that instead of inflation the Government could issue, say $25,000,000,000 or $30,000,000,000 of currency to be good for all debts, public or private, and call in all bonds or other securities drawing interest? This alone would save over $1,000,000,000 in interest. Ordinarily, this would balance the budget, and at the same time not increase the debt of the Government $1, as real inflation would. We are off the gold standard, so the currency would be just the same as our bonds except that it would not draw interest.

The President has called for gold. Why not bonds? As for our bonds being backed by gold, there is not gold enough in the world to pay our debt. So what is the use of making them payable in gold?

G. W. SUTHERLAND.

Newport, Wash.

An Eyesore.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will you kindly allow a commuter to your city for 30 years to call your attention to a condition that has lasted that long?

About 30 years ago the railroad tracks across Potomac Park were changed by raising them onto an embankment. The embankment is what I wish to speak of. Just to whom does it belong, any way? For no one takes care of it.

It is true that when it was first built some one planted honeysuckle vines, presumably to keep it from washing, on a part of it. But the section or part that is between the outlet from the Tidal Basin and the lower end of Fourteenth street was never even improved that much. Also, the abutment to the bridge over the street was never finished. The whole site along there is and always has been an eyesore.

How the District engineers could have been down there so many times and apparently never had seen the conditions is beyond me. We thought surely they would see it when they widened the road there and dug part of the bank away, or this year when they graded and filled in on the west side of the road.

As Others See It

Slovenly Written.

The farm mortgage moratorium amendment to the bankruptcy act has been held unconstitutional by Judge Chestnut in the Federal District Court at Baltimore. The decision points out that, first, the amendment removes the protection given the contracting creditor by the laws of each State and doubles the protection of the farmer-debtor; and, second, "tends to supersede the right retained by each individual State in the operation of its courts and to abrogate contracts legally entered into. * * *"

The opinion stresses the inequity of the amendment in the details of its application and reaches the conclusion that "such legislation, whether Federal or State, is quite subversive of the most fundamental principles of the social contract, and more specifically is not consistent with due process of law."

The moratorium was frankly drawn in favor of distressed farmers, victims of depression conditions, who, unless some such assistance were provided, would in many instances lose their farms by foreclosure. The element of public policy entered into its enactment. It was argued, too, that, by and large, creditor as well as debtor would profit by the procedure, and that the temporary discrimination against the creditor and the undeniable suspension of contracts were, in that view, justifiable.

The court takes cognizance of these considerations and contentions, but cites "the imperative duty of the judicial branch to declare the law invalid if not consistent with the Constitution."

It will be recalled, perhaps, that this moratorium amendment, passed in the rush and confusion of the closing days of the last session of Congress, was criticized as loosely drawn. The question was informally raised as to whether the President would sign it. He did so reluctantly, it is understood, and with the comment that it was carelessly worded and would have to be strengthened by amendments.

Some time ago, Prof. Britton, of the University of Illinois College of Law, in discussing slovenly written legislation and the cost it imposed on the public by ensuing litigation, offered this farm mortgage moratorium as a flagrant example. The professor's judgment seems to be vindicated in this instance, along with the apprehensions of the President.

The Post Impressionist

Forgetting Parson Weems.

Postoffice, Tuesday.

NO bells rang in southern Maryland yesterday to honor the birth of a famous native son. Nor were tablets unveiled to keep alive the memory of that stanch patriot, the Rev. Mason Locke Weems. Perhaps it was because Parson Weems' later achievements in Virginia in the neighborhood of Mount Vernon have obscured his early connections with southern Maryland. Or it may be that his start in life has been forgotten because it was an unfortunate one. The 175th anniversary of his birth passed unnoticed, for he has been without honor in his own country.

Legends grow up about the figures of all great men. We have the Lincoln, Lee and Roosevelt cycles, to name a few familiar ones. But far surpassing these, both in bulk and quality, is the Washington cycle, which is wholly the product of Mason Weems. To have gained immortality by an anecdote is a feat which only a genius can attain. On this score posterity must give Weems a high place among the immortals. To him we owe the cherry tree legend and many another tale about the youthful George Washington. Indeed, Weems' position as a figure of National importance is recognized. It is fitting then to leave the well-known story of his rise to fame and revive his all but forgotten associations with the countryside of his birth.

Weems was born in Anne Arundel County October 1, 1759, at the family mansion of Marshes Seat, on Herring Bay, a small inlet of the Chesapeake. Though one of the youngest of 19 children, yet his parents, being people of substance, were able to send young Mason to Kent School at Chestertown, now known as Washington College. Then followed several years in Europe, where he took orders in the Church of England, being ordained shortly after the close of the Revolution. He returned to Maryland in 1784, having already been promised the rectorship of All Hallow's Church in Anne Arundel County, only a few miles from his home.

The young man was handicapped from the start. He was inexperienced, but already he showed some of the peculiar characteristics which later made him famous and which did not now add to his popularity. For a clergyman of his time, he was indeed eccentric. "One of nature's oddities," the sternly serious Bishop Claggett called him. But Weems was more than this. He was also a very liberal minded fellow. A lover of gayety, provided it was of an innocent sort, the worthy parson must have shocked his parishoners many a time by his dancing, fiddling, clowning and cardplaying. Yet it was not only this that made him unpopular; there were other things he did of which they could not approve. He offended the stricter members of his congregation by once preaching in a Methodist church. In reply to his critics he stated that he was ready to preach at any time and in any place, and he proved this on one occasion by preaching in the ballroom at Upper Marlborough.

Once in every fortnight he held services for the benefit of the colored slaves in his parish, a thing unheard of in those times. "A charitable attempt! I hope it will be successful," cynically remarked a fellow clergyman. But the parson explained that no matter what others thought, he would continue to preach to those who, like the slaves, were eager to hear the word of God.

Yet, another time Weems showed himself unwilling to compromise with the gentry of Anne Arundel. Since he came of a respected county family and had had a European education, the young rector was taken into the hallowed society of the South River Club soon after he established himself as a clergyman. This exclusive organization was famous for its banquets of lobster, terrapin, crab, fine liquor and witty conversation. From the very start the parson refused to enter into the spirit of these festal occasions. When his turn came to preside over the meeting, he proposed for discussion the idea that the use of liquor, except in cases of illness, is a harmful and evil practice. To suggest that the South River Club serve no liquor at its banquets was as much a heresy as to suggest that Greta Garbo be cast in the role of Shylock.

It must be admitted that Weems undertook his clerical duties here at a trying time. The Episcopal Church in this country just after the Revolution suffered from having formerly been a part of the Church of England. Anything English was hateful to patriotic Americans. Newly ordained, the young man settled down to his work and found it difficult. His parish, instead of growing in numbers, diminished. After the first year he found it necessary to conduct a school for girls in order to meet his expenses. But even from the start, this also was a doubtful enterprise, and before long the young minister found himself with but one pupil. After four years of fruitless labor he resigned. Undaunted he took over the neighboring parish of Westminster, but here, too, the same depressing experience was repeated, and before long Parson Weems was looking about for another way to earn his living. So ended the unhappy connections with his birthplace.

Fame and fortune, however, came to him upon his removal to Virginia, which was the locale of his triumphs, and where today his memory is chrished alongside of Virginia's famous sons.

A Big Victory for My Side

IN THESE contests such as apparently were going on between Mr. Roosevelt and Business it is seldom that either side wins a complete victory. This being the case, I think Business will use poor judgment if it doesn't accept the President's proffer of Sunday night as a happy solution to their controversy and go ahead and recover. Mr. Roosevelt went more than half the way.

BARGERON

As I understand it, there was a serious deadlock between them. Business had taken a definite stand that it would not recover unless Mr. Roosevelt answered favorably a series of questions put by the United States Chamber of Commerce, and, while he did not say so, the impression we got was that Mr. Roosevelt's attitude was he would be darned if he would answer them. It was a pretty state of affairs: Business making certain demands before it would recover and the President apparently of the attitude that it could go hang before he would grant them.

* * * *

Presumably coming to be of a mind, however, that such controversies never get anywhere, he did answer all of the questions Sunday night except one—that of what he intends to do about the dollar. In view of the degree of its victory it would be foolish for Business to hold out and refuse to recover until it gets an answer to this.

All life is a compromise. Don't we insist upon compromises in our industrial disputes? Well, certainly Business can afford to go without triumphing on this one remaining question and call the fight off. Particularly, when it seemed to a lot of us who listened to him that Mr. Roosevelt's concessions were coming pretty hard. He seemed to be yielding begrudgingly, but be yielded. It is up to Business to yield on the one remaining point.

* * * *

It must be borne in mind that the present job of the Presidency is not an easy one. The country is divided into two bitterly contending camps, those who want recovery and those who want to punish somebody because we need recovery. In a democracy such as we have the President can't take sides. Those who want recovery have a right to live on the one hand and the punishers have a right to live, on the other. We want no such oppression as has occurred in other countries.

The ideal statesmanship of the times would be to give satisfaction to the punishers, but quietly and when they were not looking, bring about recovery; to work it in such a way that the punishers wouldn't know about it until they woke up some morning and found recovery here. They would find then that they liked recovery so much that they would forget all about punishing.

* * * *

But this is most difficult to do. There will be loud squalls from the punishers now that Mr. Roosevelt has run out on them and gone over to the side of the recoverers. In this connection, though, I think his speech was most adroit. It can be pointed out to the punishers that he took a dig at the bankers, at the Wall street gamblers, and at the "old order."

Personally, I am not going to let the speech influence me in my determination not to recover just yet. I am going to hold out until we get a promise that the loose literary output and loose talking on the part of the New Dealers will cease. It isn't what they actually do that makes me nervous so much as the way they write and talk.

But I wouldn't advise that as a general course. It's my personal reaction.

Generally speaking, we should go ahead and recover, say for three months. Then we can come back again with the demand that the question about the dollar be answered. In the meantime, we recoverers will have added greatly to our strength and the President will be completely on our side. At heart he is with us, I think.

U. S. Trade in India Urged by Dr. Das

Equal Opportunity for Us, Theme of Lecture.

Equal commercial opportunity in India for this country was urged yesterday by Dr. Taraknath Das, lecturer on Far Eastern affairs, in an address to the Twentieth Century Club at the Wardman Park Hotel.

"Under the present fiscal and tariff policy in India," he said, "there is nothing like 'open door' for American commerce. India is one of the great commercial centers of the world. The policy of 'imperial preference' in India is opposed by nationalists who are advocating the application of the principle of reciprocity between India and other nations.

"If the 'open door' in Manchuria is important for the United States then the 'open door' in India is 20 times more important. From the standpoint of international relations India is no less important than Russia or China. In fact, free India will be the center of a new balance of power in the Orient and the Occident."

A native of Mississippi, for eight years prior to his coming here in 1927 to join the old commission, he served on the State Supreme Court bench. Slight of build, quiet-spoken, with a precise judicial manner, he coordinates the commission's control. Fears on Soviet Entry In League Unjustified

Radical Changes at Geneva Not Likely to Result From Seating of Litvinoff; Old Entente of Russia and France Is Revived.

By Dr. Leonid I. Strakhovsky, School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University.

WHEN 39 nations voted the admission of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics into the League of Nations both freinds and foes of the league drew a deep breath and asked themselves: What next?

The friends were somewhat frightened at the idea of having an avowed anticapitalist state obtain the use of the most perfect speakers' tribune for the spread of revolutionary doctrines, and the foes were aghast lest the presence of the rotund and jovial Litvinoff, representing one-sixth of the terrestrial globe at the August meetings in Geneva, might lend new vitality to a body which was only awaiting burial, according to their statements.

Unfortunately for both of them it is to be feared that the entrance of Russia into the league will not precipitate any radical changes either at Geneva or in the entire world, because this act is the natural outgrowth of the post-war revival of the system of alliances vigorously sponsored by France.

It is curious and, one may add, lamentable to note how quickly we are misled, by the brilliance of a personality or of a political phase, into believing that an entirely new policy with regard to relations with other states has been launched by a given country, forgetting on the spot all the historical heritage of that country and its geo-political determination. Beeause of those factors a country's policy simply can not be manufactured overnight.

Thus in the case of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics we still have old Russia occupying a definite territory, bound to defend this territory both in the East and in the West, and bent to preserve its territorial integrity by any means, but preferably by peaceful means, no matter whether the communistic experiment succeeds or not.

From the point of view of the historical development of Russia, it is immaterial by what name the country is known or who resides in the Kremlin—Csar and autocrat of all the Russias or Joseph Stalin, secretary general of the All-Union Communist party. Russia has been, is, and will probably be for a long time yet a great power by the sheer extent of her territory and the number of her people. Therefore the entrance of Russia into the league is as natural as a similar entrance of any power into the only international organization which aspires to preserve peace. In the long run it may prove beneficial and is certainly less costly than waging a war.

* * * *

THERE is no doubt that the Soviet leaders, when deciding to join the League of Nations of which they have spoken and written so disparagingly ever since the league was formed, had in mind protection in the Far East, where Japan continues to be a menace to Russian territory, and in the West, where Germany, joining hands with Poland, becomes a potential danger. This purpose could have been attained through a defensive alliance with France similar to the Franco-Russian entente of 1894. But France indicated that the road to Paris lay through Geneva.

Thus Soviet Russia went to her Canossa in order to obtain French protection and the moral support of the world in case she should be forced to resort to arms in the Far East or on her western frontiers.

In other words, Russia's entrance into the League of Nations is primarily the revival of the old Franco-Russian entente, thus fulfilling the historic tradition of an anti-German understanding.

It was during the Seven Years' War that Russia, in alliance with France and Austria, opposed Frederick the Great of Prussia and his ally, England. In 1759 the Russians under Gen. Saltykov defeated Frederick near Frankfort-on-the-Oder and almost captured the Prussian king. In the next year they took Berlin and raised a contribution from this proud capital. Only the death of Empress Elizabeth of Prussia (in 1761) saved Prussia from utter ruin, as her heir, Peter III, and his spouse, the future Catherine the Great, being Germans, promptly concluded peace with Frederick II.

This first alliance with France was revived in the Franco-Russian entente and now reappears. The form of government does not particularly matter. Imperial Russia was far from being in sympathy with French republicanism, nor did France favor Russian autocracy. The same case is apparent now, when the Soviets, denouncing capitalism and the bourgeoisie, are accepting the proffered hand of bourgeois and capitalist France. It is a marriage of convenience, not of love.

ALTHOUGH aiming primarily at alliance with France, Russia's league membership will doubtless contribute to the preservation of peace. Litvinov has already clearly indicated that he will strive to establish an Eastern Locarno, by the terms of which Russia's western frontiers will be guaranteed, thus contributing to the general maintenance of the status quo.

Furthermore, in joining the League of Nations, Soviet Russia obligated herself to follow a certain set of ethical rules in her relations with fellow members. Thus she is naturally no longer in a position to stir up trouble in her old cynical way. After all, membership in that exclusive club imposes obligations which can not be discarded for fear of ostracism by the world's public opinion. And Soviet Russia right at present is very sensitive to world reactions.

All in all, Russia's entrance into the league is a great diplomatic victory for Louis Barthou, the veteran statesman, who was an ardent supporter of the Franco-Russian entente, who opposed the Bolsheviks as ardently, and who now extends a welcoming hand to them, all for the purpose of peace, even though it be an armed peace.

H. I. Phillips' Once Over

The WVFFA.

Elmer Twitchell is working to have the Government create the WVFFA— Winter Vacation Federal Financing Administration.

* * * *

"I don't see why the Government shouldn't appropriate funds to help people go to Florida, California or other resorts this winter," declared Mr. Twitchell today. "It appropriates money for everything else."

* * * *

"How would you have this done?" Mr. Twitchell was asked.

"I would have the President or Congress set up the WVFFA," he said, "and put through an appropriation of a few billion dollars, so people who want to go to Florida, for instance, but are a little hard pressed, may borrow what they need."

* * * *

"Is the winter vacation crisis serious?" he was asked.

"It is getting worse and worse. The country has thousands of people who used to go to Florida every winter, but can not do it now. Something should be done for them."

"Does the lack of a Florida vacation constitute suffering?"

"It certainly does, and most acute suffering," declared Elmer. "In fact, the suffering of a man whose house is out of repair is comparatively trivial. Take me personally: The porch is falling off my house, the stairs need fixing and the roof leaks, but I would rather borrow money and go away for the winter than fix the old place and stick it out in cold weather."

* * * *

"How would you have the Government Winter Vacation Federal Financing Administration work?"

"I would have it advance money for winter vacations on a long-time loan plan."

"How many years should be allowed a man to pay it back?"

"Oh, 50 years would be swell, but I would compromise on 25 or 30 if the Government insisted."

* * * *

"Would you have the Government issue bonds?"

"Yes, sir. And is there any banker who is so cold he would refuse to buy Winter Vacation Financing bonds?"

"I dunno. What do you think?" Mr. Twitchell was asked.

"The bankers know how important a winter vacation is and they would not be cruel enough to oppose it. Not only that, but the bankers could have their winter vacations financed, too."

* * * *

"How would you get the people back from Florida?"

"I would have the Administration create the RFVFB, or Return From Vacation Financing Board, and appropriate more funds?"

"But where will all this money come from?"

"Get out of here!" ordered Mr. Twitchell, sternly. "You ought to know better than bring up a question like that."

As Quillen Looks at It

Table of Classes in Land of Equality.

In the year 1904, triplet sons were born to a Mrs. Cassidy in the city of Baltimore. Mr. Cassidy was a dealer in illicit spirits and commonly regarded as a man of wealth, wherefore a gang of kidnapers entered the Cassidy nursery and made off with the triplets before they were two weeks old.

The infants never were ransomed. For some reason never explained, the kidnapers abandoned them at different times and different places in the City of New York.

One of them eventually was adopted by a railway conductor, another by a rich politician, and the third by an unknown man of letters.

None ever learned anything of his family history or suspected that he had a brother. Each in time became a typical unit of his environment.

Thirty years later, in the year 1934, one of the triplets was a brakeman, another was a gay roisterer, heir to millions whose escapades often made first-page news, and the third was a newspaperman out of a job, reduced to the painful extremity of eating charity's bread or doing without.

The brakeman was "class conscious." That is, he hated the rich and frequently felt it necessary to declare himself "as good as anybody."

His pet aversion was the gay roisterer, who seemed typical of the idle rich, and each time he saw the young man's picture in a newspaper or beheld him at the wheel of an imported car, he muttered to himself: "The worthless, blood-suckin' leech! Look at the airs he puts on. He wouldn't speak to the likes of me, but he's no better than I am for all that. I hate him, and all of his stuck-up kind."

One cold winter night, while his train stood at a watering station, the brakeman opened the door of a box car and called: "All right, you punks, pile out of there. No free rides on this train."

Ridding the train of bums was part of his job and he carried a club to make it easier.

The lone passenger who climbed out of the car was the jobless newspaperman. He hadn't eaten lately and he needed a shave.

"Listen, Brother," he began earnestly.

"Don't 'Brother' me," growled the brakeman; "you dirty, lousy bum. If it wasn't for sollin' my hands, I'd teach you respect for your betters."

U. S. Suits May Halt Movement of 'Hot Oil'

E. O. Thompson, member of the Texas railroad commission, said late yesterday after a conference at the Justice Department he had been given assurances that the Government would file suits shortly to halt interstate movement of "hot oil" from the east Texas field, the Associated Press said.

Thompson, who recently asserted the Justice Department had withheld permission from United States attorneys in Texas to bring such action, said Assistant Attorney General Stephens and Bell had told him they "saw no reason" why the Government should not proceed at once.

No End of Books

Theodore Hall.

They Remember.

MEMOIRS are the stock and staple grist of the writing man. In every other line he writes, you'll find personal reminiscence. Make the acquaintance of a novelist, then read one of his books, and you'll see his very table-talk spread out in nice black type. Or a poet—of what is a poet compounded but an early snubbing by the big boys of the school, and the fact that the first girl he got a pulse over wouldn't so much as say "Good Morning" to him?

THEO. HALL.

And lots of other people, beside the professionals, are given to tracing their cervical wrinkles. It's with somewhat less heat than the matter deserves that Walter Winchell, telling what he'd do if he were Napoleon of the book business, said the other day: "If a man swam the Erie Canal, stepped on Nicholas Murry Butler's big toe at a junior prom, or carved his initials on the shell of a live spitting cobra (a point in natural history I don't quite get—T. H.) he'd have to learn the entire Koran, Talmud, and Bible by heart—before being allowed to write of his experiences."

But the memoirs noticed below have rather better justification.

There are two pieces of luck for the rest of us connected with the first book. A—that one man should have had his eye constantly on the center of White House life during the Administrations of ten Presidents. B—that he should have had an avidly curious mind and the habit of jotting down, on scraps of paper, even on his cuff, his impressions of everything he saw.

Irwin H. (Ike) Hoover's posthumous book, "42 Years in the White House" (Houghton Mifflin, $3.50), is such a gathering of gossip in high places as has never been duplicated. Beginning as an electrician in Benjamin Harrison's time, soon becoming an usher and then chief usher right down to the present administration, he watched the heroes as only a "valet" can. Harrison's timidity with electric lights, Cleveland's energy, T. R.'s courtesy, Wilson's second courting, Coolidge's rages—here is what went on behind the headlines. We see Lindbergh, "the perfect guest," and little Bryan Untiedt, of Colorado, arriving the same morning with the King and Queen of Siam.

There's everything in the book from unwritten history to the most irrelevant-seeming tid-bit — all frankly put, all fascinating to read.

"British Agent" is already a byword of adventurous intrigue. Its author, R. H. Bruce Lockhart, now goes on with a narrative of post-war turmoil in central Europe—"Retreat from Glory" (Putnam, $3). In Prague he was the commercial secretary of the British Legation, watched the bubble of mad inflation, hobnobbed with prime ministers and archdukes, got himself 10,000 pounds in debt, and had a grand, romantic time of it all.

Travels around Europe (he interviewed the former kaiser) add color. The book hasn't the concentrated suspense of "British Agent"—Lockhart writes of a period fundamentally different. Yet for this young Scotsman's gusto and joyout air and clear pictures of frenzied diplomacy you should enjoy "Retreat from Glory" quite as much.

* * * *

Of all the people with whom Theodore Roosevelt loved to associate, none has interested me more than that gay, sensitive, and gallant figure, "Wintie" Chanler. There are no tomes about him; he is just a light passing through the books about other people.

It is thus with "Roman Spring" (Little Brown, $3), a volume of memoirs by his wife, Margarte Terry (Mrs. Winthrop) Chanler. "Wintie" is there, but too briefly. For dozens of other memorable souls claim attention.

Mrs. Chanler was the daughter of Luther Terry, the painter; stepdaughter of Thomas Crawford, the sculptor who carved the Indian on top of the Capitol; half sister of F. Marion Crawford, the novelist; and niece of Julia Ward Howe. She had, you see, a heritage of distinguished company, and she found more in her own right. Longfellow, Henry Cabot Lodge, Cecil Spring-Rice, Henry Adams, Henry James—her book is studded with such names, all known well and familiarly. Four years in Rome, long ago, give the book its title and old-world flavor, but there is as much about Newport and Washington. Mrs. Chanler, in her own happy phrase, writes "the praises of delightful people." The result is charming, and as remote as the years before the war.

The late Sir Edmund William Gosse (1849-1928) introduced Hendrik Ibsen to English readers, wrote about everything from Restoration drama to life of pious Jeremy Taylor. For years he and George Saintsbury shared the high priesthood of literary criticism in England.

But nothing in his voluminous work is so likely to endure as his little masterpiece of autobiography—"Father and Son" (1907) now issued in the Oxford Press' World Classics series 80 cents). Much like Samuel Butler's "Way of All Flesh," it traces superbly the basic conflict of the last century—Science versus Religious Fundamentalism. He on the first side, his father on the second, dramatize with truth and accuracy one of the growing pains of the world.

Chicago Held Center Of U. S. Art in Future

San Francisco, Oct. 1 (AP).—When America reaches artistic maturity, Chicago is more likely to be the great artistic center than New York, in the opinion of Paul Jamot, director of painting of the Louvre, Paris, and himself an artist.

New York, he said, is "impressive and amazing." San Francisco is "beautiful in landscape and setting;" but Chicago has "the most personality."

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

The Government of Every Country.

A little book that has just been published contains an enormous amount of useful and valuable information in a very small space. It is called "Outline of Governments," and is by Roger Shaw, foreign editor of the Review of Reviews, and is published by the Review of Reviews Corporation in New York.

The volume is in quarto style, excellently well printed, contains only 212 pages and tells how every country in the world at this moment is being governed. Not only great nations like France, Germany, Italy, Russia, but all nations. There are 70 separate nations included.

And at the end of the account for each nation there is a table of statistics, giving the area of the country, with a visual comparison. For example, the area of the Irish Free State is slightly more than that of West Virginia. The populaton is nearly 3,000,000. The account seems somewhat pro-Irish Republic, but figures are given, and one may judge for oneself.

Each South American state is a republic; five are democratic republics and five are dictatorial republics. Brazil is larger than the United States of America, but instead of 120,000,000 inhabitants, it has 41,000,000.

Do you know what the government of Finland is? Do you know that the Finnish language is a Mongolian dialect? Did you know the Finns tried prohibition and later repealed it by popular vote? That they were pioneers in woman suffrage? The statement "among the upper classes some Swedish is still spoken" is a decided underestimate. All the upper classes speak Swedish.

The introductory chapters to the volume contain a large amount of miscellaneous information on the League of Nations, other world organizations, vanishing monarchs, democracy versus dictatorship, proportional representation, world languages, religion, milestones to nationhood. There are in the world nearly 3,000 languages; which makes the Tower of Babel look silly.

Mexican Polo Team Has Farewell Party

Players Are Guests of Brig. Gen. W. E. Horton at Chevy Chase Club; Secretary of War and Mrs. Dern Also Present.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The farewell party for the gallant young members of the Mexican Army Polo Team, which has finished the matches with the United States Army Polo Team here, was given yesterday afternoon at the Chevy Chase Club by Brig. Gen. William E. Horton. The team will leave today for White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., for a series of games before returning to Mexico.

They presented a charming sight yesterday afternoon as the distinguished assembly of guests gathered around the buffet tables or before the crackling log fires which took the chill off the early autumn air.

Gen. Horton received his guests in the card room of the club, not formally, but mingling with them as they arrived and seeing that everybody knew everybody else. The guests included the Mexican players, members of the Mexican Embassy staff, and members of the polo committee, as well as the Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern. Mrs. Dern, seated at the tea table, wore a suit of light blue crepe with a smart felt hat of the same shade, and was surrounded by a group of young people. The table was decorated with tall silver vases of red and white dahlias, and green ferns, repeating the colors of the Mexican flags, which, with the American flag, were draped in the corners of the room.

Mrs. Woodring Present.

Later in the afternoon there was a radio broadcast by the United States Army Band, which played the new march written for the Mexican team.

Deb's Diary

Who, What and Where —as She Sees It.

DEAR DIARY:

Cats certainly are smart. Yesterday morning going down in the apartment elevator I heard the insistent meowing of some feline. When we reached the first floor, there sat old Tiger Tom, smack in front of the iron door, slowly but plainly thumping his long tail in impatience. He didn't wait long for an invitation, but bounded into the mechanical cage and settled himself in one corner—ready for his trip. He really seems to enjoy the ups and downs of life. Apparently the machine age has invaded the animal kingdom.

Diary, I have been let in on a secret—but I won't tell even you her name. A certain young lady of the Capital, who recently returned to school expecting to be weighed down by studies, has found time to start a novel. Judging from what I have been allowed to see of it, it promises to be something good and quite different.

The Medicine Your Mother and Your Grandmother Depended On

Pretty Hands Must Display No Wrinkles

"Mask" Now Available to Soften and Bleach the Skin.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE PRIMARY step in developing beautiful hands is making them soft and white. Millions of dollars every year go into manicures and manicure preparations, but no matter how excellent the operator and expensive the materials, the hands are not going to be their best until they're treated in a more fundamental fashion.

For long, tapering fingers and groomed nails to show to perfection the hands must be treated so that skin loses its myriad of wrinkles and becomes smooth. The hard outer skin should be softened and bleached.

There is one preparation that will do all these things. It's called a "hand mask." If it is rubbed on and allowed to remain about 5 or 10 minutes before it is removed you'll note a striking difference in the texture of the skin.

Those women who see that their age is more apparent in the wrinkles on their hands than face should be jubilant that such a preparation exists. Others who claim that housework plays havoc with their hands may rejoice to know that here is something that will repair all the damage done during the day.

Young women who take a very just pride in their hands should be pleased beyond measure that the mask will enable them to preserve this "hand beauty."

Pine-Scented Bath Grains.

To hear a woman praise bath grains would be nothing out of the ordinary. But when it was a man—that's the story.

"I don't know much about shopping," said the gentleman, a 6-footer in coarse English tweeds, "but I sort of liked the idea of this. I read about it first in an ad. 'Bath grains,' it said, 'with the scent of pine.' I always liked pine, so I went by and bought some."

His audience waited wondering—

"They're a knockout!" he finished.

It seems that when the gentleman comes home in the evening dead tired, a tub of warm water with a sprinkling of the woodsy bath crystals peps him up no end. "Exhilarating" was one of his adjectives.

All in all there was nothing to do but look into the cause of his enthusiasm. In a short while the grains, or crystals as some say, were located. They come in little cellophane packages, containing an ample amount to last for weeks. The price is 27 cents a package, or four for $1.

For Beauty Cultivation.

This week it is possible to buy the preparations of a certain English beautician for 20 per cent less than usual. In as much of most of her cosmetics are fairly expensive, this annual reduction is a generally "waited for" occurrence.

The beautician says, "No other study will so well repay you as the cultivation of your own beauty."

Having made a study of beauty herself, she has an unusually fine assortment of skin preparations designed to clear the skin of blemishes, refine pores, remove discolorations, stimulate and bleach skin and erase wrinkles.

Interesting Lamps.

There's a certain department in a downtown store where you wouldn't expect to find lamps. But there they are—odd, interesting little novelties of all descriptions. The newest arrivals are scarcely a foot high, with round, low chrome or copper bases and bulging parchment shades. They're simply ideal for little hall lamps to leave lighted when you go out, in a "keep the home fires burning" spirit. Equipped with standard-size bulbs, they're splendid for a child's desk, as they give a fine reading light. Anyone busy fixing up a cellar playroom or attic bedroom is apt to find them an added attraction. They cast only $1 and $1.25.

New Boxes for Stationery.

Stationery in a variety of interesting boxes has just arrived to grace the counters in a downtown store. The writing paper and envelopes are of fine quality, but the chief appeal lies in the way they're boxed.

There's one box looking like a small wardrobe with a large lower drawer and smaller top one. And there's a cedar chest—an unusually large one—filled to the brim with stationery. Many of the boxes have odd shapes. Not one in the bunch costs over a dollar. Many are 50 cents.

Large, flat composition dolls, several widths thicker than the ordinary paper doll, come in a box with several sheets of felt which are printed with pictures of the doll's wardrobe. A child can have no end of fun clipping these out and fitting them on.

There is no monotony in the game, as the doll's wardrobe is like that of a prima donna. Dresses, hats, cloaks, shoes, come in all styles to suit any occasion.

The package includes little buttons and extras which are to be clipped off and sewed on the coats and frocks.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 105, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Whooping Cough.

OTHER than measles, no infection of infancy and childhood holds such a wide sway or is more dangerous than whooping cough. No age is wholly immune, although the disease is usually contracted early in life. It causes an untold amount of suffering, and in the very young is attended with a high mortality—higher than that of any other communicable disease. About 300,000 cases of whooping cough were reported in the United Sates during 1932, and there were about 6,000 deaths. Of these, nearly 95 per cent occurred before the third year of life. Whooping cough causes as many deaths as do scarlet fever and measles combined.

Despite the danger that accompanies the disease, some parents seem to regard the infection lightly and look upon it as "a bad half hour" to be got through with as soon as possible. This attitude can be accounted for only on the assumption that the serious character of the disease is not appreciated, nor the high death rate well known.

The disease is spread by direct contact with infected particles from the mouth, nose and throat of an active case. Eating utensils, handkerchiefs, toys and, in fact, anything that has come in contact with a child who has the disease, may serve as the communicating agent. Whooping cough is contagious from its earliest stages until convalescence is well established.

The first symptoms are usually noted about seven days after exposure, and frequently mistaken for a mild cold. Fever develops gradually, symptoms of a cold become its appearance. Within a few days the cough increases in frequency and it is then that the disease is usually recognized because of the choking, spasmodic character of the cough that seems to be worse at night. Then follows a period of from four to eight weeks in which the nutrition of the child suffers, the blood is deprived of the proper amount of oxygen and there may be very distressing symptoms due to the persistent coughing spells.

The seizures begin with a sense of suffocation. There is usually a short pause in breathing, a sound as though the child was choking, followed by a deep inspiration, and then a series of expulsive coughs more manifest and the cough makes in rapid sequence. During the "spell" air does not enter the lungs and the face assumed a bloated, swollen and purplish appearance. As soon as the spasm ceases, there follows the deep sucking in of air that gives the characteristic whoop. As many as 50 or more attacks may occur in each 24 hours. Frequently vomiting follows or accompanies attack, and unless great care and attention are paid to feeding the child promptly, starvation becomes a real menace.

In 1906 two French observers described an organism that is generally believed to be the causative factor in whooping cough. The organism is called the bacillus pertussis. Within the last few years laboratory workers have developed a whooping cough vaccine that holds great promise. Because of the peculiar nature of the organism special methods of culture are required, and only by the use of these methods has it been possible to develop a suitable vaccine.

So far as is known, the vaccine is of little, if any, help after the disease has once been established. It will, however, protect a very high percentage of children if used at least four months before exposure occurs. The vaccine is protective rather than curative. A considerable number of young patients immunized through the use of whooping cough vaccine have been repeatedly exposed without danger. Because of the unusually fatal character of the disease, especially in the first two years of life, vaccine administration should be begun shortly after the age of six months.

Prevention consists in avoiding contacts with known cases of the disease. If whooping cough exists in your neighborhood, make certain that your children avoid every possible exposure. Should whooping cough develop in your home, see that the neighbors' children are not permitted any association with the patient under your care.

What Today Means

"Libra."

IF OCTOBER 2 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. and from 10:30 p. m. until midnight.

On this October 2 timidity might have a great deal to do in swaying the decisions, actions or policies of certain individuals with whom you may come into contact. Affirmative thought and definite statements can possibly counteract, to a certain degree, any threatened delays, a lack of firm judgment or a resolution might make imminent.

An agreeable message may be received through the medium of a letter or the telephone, which if not ignored, may result in some financial benefit to you in a rather roundabout way. Caution should be used in signing any papers presented by strangers, unless they are carefully read and clearly understood.

Financial transactions on this date can be greatly simplified by directness being used in the presentation of whatever the proposition might be and the avoidance of irrelevant discussion. It might be advisable to refrain from any attempt to mix business up with any form of social entertainment, as your motive might be misconstrued. Married and engaged couples, as well as those in the first stages of love making, should find this a good day to get special favors granted, providing they are within reason.

If a woman and October 2 is your natal day, you may find that this may prove to be a turning point in your life and that the coming year will bring you greater peace and contentment than you have anticipated. Love probably will be instrumental in bringing you a message that can not be misunderstood and should fill your heart with gratitude. If you will avoid being too demanding when dealing with family or friends, you will find life much easier.

You should take an active part in social activities. If you will engage in some line of business where your personality will be regarded as an asset, you should do much better than in a line of work where you are regarded as only a cog in the wheel. Married life should appeal to you, as you have the qualities the average man appreciates.

The child born on October 2, generally, when it reaches its teens, is inclined to be very aggressive and self-assertive. A little tact will keep these characteristics from becoming offensive.

If a man and October 2 is your birthday, your versatility will enable your making a success in any business or profession you engage in, providing you do not allow egotism to develop to the degree that it might affect your popularity.

Cold Weather Menu Needs Jams, Jellies

Recipe Given for Citron Preserve With Ginger Root and Lemon.

By Susan Mills.

TODAY the honorable mentions from Saturday's contest will fill this column with their delicious recipes. Jams, jellies, preserves, butters, all have their place in the fall and winter menu, and their place is an important one.

Citron Preserves.

Cut the citron in thin slices; boil in water with a small piece of alum until clear and tender. Rinse in cold water. Make a sirup of ¾ pound sugar to a pound of citron, adding a piece of ginger root to the sirup. Add citron to sirup, add 1 slice lemon to every 3 pounds of fruit. Allow to boil a few minutes. When fruit is tender, put in glass jars and seal.

Miss Olive Pindell, of Baltimore, Md., a young and promising cook of 13 years, says that her recipe has been made often by her grandmother. Miss Pindell helps to make the jam in school for Christmas baskets. Here is her recipe:

Prune, Apple and Raisin Jam.

Pit 3 cups cooked prunes. Wash 1 cup seedless raisins. Put prunes and raisins through medium food chopper. Add two cups peeled and sliced apples, 3 cups water, 1 cup prune juice, 3 cups sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon grated orange rind, 1-3 cup orange juice. Cook until mixture reaches the right consistency, pour into glasses, seal.

From Mrs. M. Wolfer, Room 404, National Union Building, comes a recipe used for generations on a farm in upper New York.

Spiced Currants.

5 pounds fruit
4 pounds sugar
2 teaspoons cloves
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 pint vinegar.

Wash and stem fruit and put all ingredients into heavy kettle. Cook together until quite thick, or for about two hours. Fill glasses and cover with parafin. To be served with fowl, cold meats or game. Excellent for holiday dinners.

Mrs. A. Hildreth Spilman, 1318 Thirty-fourth street northwest, has a simple recipe using quinces and pears.

Harlequin Chips.

2 large quinces
8 large pears
Sugar
1 cup of water.

Wash and pare the quinces and pears, then cut them into uniform chips, discarding the cores. Measure the fruit and add an equal quantity of sugar less one cup. Add the water and cook slowly until the fruit is soft. The slow cooking makes the chips a lovely pink color.

Playroom Planned For Boston Court

Will Take Care of Children Awaiting Hearings.

Boston, Oct. 1 (Spl.).—The uncomfortable conditions in the juvenile court in the Salem District of Boston, where the children who await hearings run back and forth and play in the corridors has inspired the idea of a playroom in the juvenile courts.

At the headquarters of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children the idea crystallized into a picture of a place where a play-pen, children's books and interesting toys would provide a comfortable atmosphere and entertainment.

"But," said the court officials, "it has never been done before." They are still trying to decide whether they should proceed with the plan.

THE MAN WITHOUT NERVES

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Sam Cresson has been found dead in the London suburb of Sandywayes, apparently driven to suicide by blackmailers. The lifeless body of Sir Julian Bott, famous financier, shortly after is found near the isolated home of Mme. de Sayal. Suspicion points to Anthony Sarson, who saw a car near there the night of the murder and, investigating, was called into Mme. de Sayal's home, where she gave him a revolver "for protection." As he left, he was knocked unconscious, and awoke next morning to find himself in the house again. Mme. de Sayal cautioned him to secrecy. It was not until his return to the village that he learned of Sir Julian's murder, but remembering his promise he said he had fallen and spent the night unconscious on the ground. He returns next evening to visit Mme. de Sayal to assure her he has kept his promise. Particularly annoying to Anthony are the investigations of a stranger in the village, named Tyssen, who says he is collecting material for a novel.

MME. DE SAYAL laughed mirthlessly.

"Fancy your murdering any one, anyway!" she said to Anthony. "Why, you would only have to stand up in the dock and any jury would send you home to your parents! I never saw any one more like the golden-haired cherub at the top of his class in the Sunday school and less like a criminal Besides, why on earth should they associate you with the affair?"

"Well, for one thing, I didn't return home all night," he pointed out, "and came back with what they all look upon as a somewhat thin story. The only inhabited house up in this direction is yours. You are reputed to be somethng of an enchantress—every one calls you 'la belle incognito,' you know, and tosh like that—and finally there is no one else in the running. If I didn't kill him, who did?"

"Why is it so certain that he did not kill himself?" she asked.

"Because," he explained, and this time he kept his eyes fixed upon hers, "they have not found the weapon. A man can not shoot himself through the heart and throw a revolver a long distance away afterward."

"I'm sorry if you are likely to get into trouble," she observed thoughtfully. "Still, you must remember this. If you had told them the other story—the truth as it happened—that you had received a knockout blow in the darkness from some one whom you had never seen, and were unconscious for five or six hours afterward, that would have been just as incredible."

"I suppose it would have been," he admitted.

Pertinent Question.

"Did you know," he asked, "that one barrel of the revolver you lent me had been recently fired?"

"Not recently," she objected. "I believe that I did test it when I first came here. I have always kept it loaded. My maid, as I expect you know, lives in the next bungalow, but she is elderly and would be perfectly useless in the event of an alarm."

"Why did you lend it me?" he asked.

She shrugged her shoulders slightly.

"I thought it was a natural sort of protection. Where is it now, by the way?"

"It is locked up at the present moment in a drawer in my room," he confided. "If by chance our friend, Inspector Penny, knew where it was I should spend the night in the county police station."

"What made you lock it up?" she inquired.

"Impulse," he answered. "It was in my jacket pocket. Anyone might have seen it when I got down to the village and heard about the murder. I don't know whether I should have been any better off if I had produced it at once. I expect I should. Anyhow, I didn't."

"Why didn't you?" she reiterated.

"I suppose because I was afraid that it might get you into trouble," he admitted reluctantly.

She laughed contemptuously.

"You don't suppose I murdered Julian Bott, do you?"

"I don't know whether you did or not," he replied. "Other people might have thought so. Some one did murder him, you know.

"That's true," she assented.

His words seemed to have opened up a fresh field of thought. She leaned a little farther back in her chair.

"So far," she remarked, "it seems as though the police have found out nothing of importance. Do they not even know how or why the great Sir Julian Bott should have come at all to this corner of the country?"

"Oh, they have found out about that," he told her.

"Sir Julian, it seems, was dining with Lord Milhaven, who lives at Sandywayes Court, the other side of the railway line. He went home in a hired car, as the magneto of his Rolls went wrong."

"What about the chauffeur of the hired car?"

Inquest Scheduled.

"They can't find him. They can't find out what garage he came from. Sir Julian seems to have telephoned himself. They are bound to find him before long, however.

"Is there any road back to London from here?" she asked.

"No direct way. It seems that Sir Julian, however, is a member of the swagger golf club close to here and has access to their private road. It's quite a reasonable thing that he may have tried to reach the main road to London from up here."

"When is the inquest?"

"Tomorrow morning. But it will be only a formal affair. The police are asking for an adjournment."

"Why?"

"Becaus neither the chauffeur who drove Sir Julian nor the weapon have been found."

"Why have you not brought back the revolver I lent to you?" she asked.

"I was not sure that you would want to have it," he replied quietly.

There was a brief silence. Suddenly Anthony rose to his feet. That short period of deceptive light had scarcely passed, but he felt almost convinced that he saw some one moving in the shelter of the trees.

Intruder Observed.

"If you will excuse me for a moment, Madame de Sayal," he begged, "I believe that there is some one trying to listen to our conversation."

She turned her head indifferently. Anthony strode off toward the suspected spot. Almost as he did so, a figure emerged and came toward them. It was Tyssen, in his shabby gray trousers and dark blazer. He was wearing rubber-soled shoes and he had a generally furtive appearance.

"Hello, Sarson," Tyssen observed uneasily. "I thought that was you. I wish you would introduce me to Madame de Sayal. I was just wondering whether I dare stop and ask her one or two questions."

"I do not think she would care to know you," Anthony replied promptly, "and I can not see what the mischief you are doing, sulking about behind those trees."

"My dear fellow, don't use such unpleasant expressions," Tyssen enjoined, all the time edging his way a little nearer to the spot where Madame de Sayal was seated. "I was just following out a few speculations of my own, I was wondering, to tell you the truth, how far a man, after he had fired a bullet into his own heart, could throw the weapon.

"I am not interested in your speculations," Anthony said shortly. "If you can not take a hint, Tyssen, I will speak plainly. Get out of here. I am sure Madame de Sayal does not want to talk to you."

"Sort of a Writer."

"Who is this strange person?" the former interposed.

Tyssen eagerly availed himself of the opportunity.

"Madame," he said, "my name is Tyssen. I am exceedingly glad to make your acquaintance. Mr. Sarson is very much down upon me lately because of my interest in local affairs.

"I believe that you would understand the situation much better."

"What situation are you talking about?" she asked.

"Why, it's like this," Tyssen explained. "I'm a sort of a writer. I have had one or two stories accepted by detective magazines and I am at work now upon a much more ambitious effort. I am writing a mystery story with a murder in it.

"You seem to be a very quaint person," Madame de Sayal observed, "and I certainly do not see how it is going to help you to write your book to skulk around my bungalow as you were doing."

"I beg your forgiveness," Tyssen said eagerly. "These few yards fascinate me. The spot where Julian Botts' body was found, for instance. Your bungalow, because it is the nearest house. This lane, down which Mr. Sarson staggered at 1 o'clock today, having slept out somewhere or other. It's all material for me."

Ordered Away.

She looked at him coolly. His appearance was certainly not in his favor.

"Who is your extraordinary friend, Mr. Sarson?" she asked. "Please tell him to go away.

"Do you hear that, Tyssen?" Sarson said firmly. "Be off at once. I don't know where you were brought up, but you ought to know better than to butt in upon strangers like this. Down the hill, if you please."

Tyssen showed no sign of resentment.

He shambled off. Madame de Sayal's eyes followed him for a short distance.

"What a terrible person," she remarked, in a tone of disgust. "Was he really trying to listen to us?"

"I belive so," Anthony assented, resuming his seat. "The fellow is an intolerable nuisance. He writes page after page every day of some tripe which he calls his novel, and he is always hanging about, trying to get ideas as to how the detective and sergeant work and how they collect facts."

"I have never read a novel of crime," Mme. de Sayal reflected, "but I have often wondered what sort of people write them."

Apple Helps Soup's Flavor

Dust Carpets With Mop of Flannel Dampened in Turpentine.

AHINT in time saves a lot of trouble, a nervous system and many tiring steps. Housewives know the value of shortcuts in a day's work. They let their heads save their feet.

Here are some ideas submitted by women who want to pass on their labor-saving devices. Perhaps you, too, have ways and means by which your daily work is made lighter. Send them to Susan Mills, The Washington Post, so that others may benefit by your experience.

Here are the suggestions for today:

Add an apple to vegetable soup and the flavor is much improved.

Mrs. J. D. Hudgins,
101 High street, Annapolis, Md.

Carpets may be brightened by dusting with a flannel mop dampened in turpentine. As it is a moth preventive, turpentine is effective in clothes closets.

Mrs. Mary Duval,
Box 305, Edmonston, Md.

Next time you peel or slice an onion, hold it under water, and although your fingers may be wet, your eyes will keep dry.

Mrs. Myrtle B. Drew,
207 Rhode Island avenue northeast.

If soup is salty, slice a raw potato into it, boil up a few minutes, and the salty flavor will disappear. Remove the potato and serve the soup.

Flatten the sides of a 5-cent fire shovel and use it to take hot dishes out of the oven.

Social Service Ideal Changed By Catholics

Must Aim at Prevention of Difficulties, Council Secretary Says.

By Elizabeth Young.

OUT OF THE threatened collapse of the modern social and economic structures has grown a new Catholic ideal of social service.

To treat cases of delinquency and dependency, however widely and well, is—to the trained Catholic mind—no longer enough, it was made plain yesterday by Miss Agnes G. Regan, executive secretary of the National Council of Catholic Women, which organization is convening in fourteenth annual meeting at the Mayflower Hotel this week.

For ten years assistant director of the National Catholic School of Social Service, located at 400 Nineteenth street northwest in Washington—and a major educational project of the N. C. C. W.—Miss Regan was one of three women interviewed following the Monday forenoon session of the convention, on the subject of how Catholic womanhood is organizing to combat humanity's post-depression ills.

"In the face of conditions existing in our own country and throughout the world, social workers are called upon to make a much greater contribution than they have in the past; to do a great deal more than deal with dependency and delinquency," Miss Regan said. "No matter how widely and well such work may be done today, in itself it is merely scratching the surface.

Must Be Real Leader.

"The social worker of tomorrow must be a real leader, who recognizes the need of complete reorganization of the social structure if her efforts are to be successful. She will aim at prevention of the cause, rather than treatment of the symptoms.

"She is being trained in the fields of research and community organization. She sees her major problem in the new leisure, created by changed occupational conditions, shortened working hours, children withdrawn from labor and without adequate educational opportunity, and thousands upon thousands of men and women forced out of jobs.

"This problem she has not, in the past, been trained to meet. During the past two years we have found it necessary to add new courses, particularly in the fields of economics and social ethics, to the curriculum at the National Catholic School of Social Service."

To stem the tidal wave of human misery and need literally submerging the world, the National Catholic School of Social Service is providing short emergency courses in social service work for specially qualified college graduates, and offers special postgraduate courses for workers already in the field, Miss Regan said.

284 Completed Course.

Since the school was organized in 1921—an outgrowth of a training school for women war workers created by the National Catholic War Council—it has sent 284 young women, some of them nuns, into the field of social service.

The Catholic philosophy underlying the church's development of social service emphasizes the intrinsic dignity of the human being, the eternal values and illimitable possibilities inherent in every human life and spirit, it was pointed out by Miss Mary G. Hawks, past president of the N. C. C. W., in discussing the humanitarian work which Catholic women are doing today.

"It is a doctrine at striking variance with the more materialistic philosophy, encountered among many welfare workers and sociologists today, that persons born to physical disability or deformity, or to economic underprivilege, would better never have been born at all; that disease and delinquency and poverty are irreconcilable with a spiritually ordered universe," Miss Hawks said.

Have Spiritual Ideal.

"Ours is a philosophy which orients the whole program of social service in the light of the teachings of Christ. Leaders of non-Catholic agencies invariably remark the spiritual ideal which animates our students."

A lifetime devoted to philanthropic efforts to befriend and benefit underprivileged persons has convinced Mrs. R. K. LeBlond, of Cincinnati, Ohio, that the work is best done by the trained social worker who brings spiritual understanding, as well as cultural, scientific and academic schooling, to the problem.

Because of this conviction, she has for years been donor of an annual scholarship to the National Catholic School of Social Service.

"The individual woman, regardless of her means, her generosity, and the honesty of her intentions, can never hope to do work equaling in value that of the social worker who sees the problem and the program in the round,'" said Mrs. LeBlond.

Bias-Cut Clothes Shown in Paris

Paris (U.P.).—There is much more give and take in our new fall clothes judging from the numbers of things brought out on the bias.

Sleeves are set into shoulders biasly, or very often sleeves and yoke, coming down in a design back and front, appear on short jackets as well as three-quarter and full-length coats, and on dresses themselves.

Another 1934 winter notion is the use of solid color in two and three-piece suits with the splash of color coming in a short scarf about 1 yard long and 6 to 10 inches wide. This is knotted rather close at the throat and the ends are sometimes tucked in or else they are tucked through tabs that button or fasten on the back of the lapels of the jacket or coat.

Fine leather thongs, almost like thread, are used by Roger Worth to make a sleeveless jacket in a regulation knitted manner—excellent for outdoor use under a lighter weight sport coat.

Underwood & Underwood.

"I want my people to know about the beauty of American colonial art," says Countess Lilian Orsini, Italian artist who will study art at Smith College this winter. A reprint of one of her woodprints is shown at the left.

Hopes to Draw Many Colonial Buildings and Exhibit Them in Rome; Does Not Believe Marriage Should Interfere With Career.

By Elizabeth Perrow.

WHEN THE Countess Lilian Giordano Orsini left Italy, famed land of artists, and started to America to study art at Smith College, her countrymen were neither surprised nor displeased.

"I didn't have to run away at all," she confided yesterday. She is in Washington studying colonial architecture a short while before going on to Smith.

"My parents were glad to have me come," she said, "and no one thought it strange I should study art in America."

This artist countess is as lovely as a princess in a fairy tale, but she has a vivacity and charm those listless heroines would have envied. She talks enthusiastically about everything—her work, her trip, her interest in the new life she will lead in this country. Her brown eyes sparkle as she talks, and she makes little expressive gestures with her graceful hands.

All her life, as she expresses it, Countess Orsini has been an artist. She studied painting and engraving at Rome, and did a great deal of work in frescoes.

Frescoes Hard Work.

"But frescoe painting is hard physical work and it also requires much skill," she said, "and today few frescoes are painted, even in Italy where they are very popular."

For the last four or five years Countess Orsini has been specializing in woodcuts and has won wide recognition in this field. In 1930 she received a gold medal from the Italian government for the excellence of her work. And one of her woodcuts was bought by the Italian government to hang in the Museum of Rome.

She has exhibited in Rome, Florence, Paris, Warsaw, Munich and Brussels, and articles on her work have been written in French, German, Italian, Polish and English art magazines. Critics praise her technique and drawing, and are especially enthusiastic about the skies in her woodcuts.

"I am particularly interested in the colonial art of America," she said. "That is something we know little about in Italy, and I want to carry it back to my people. I hope to draw many colonial American buildings and exhibit them in Rome.

"I am fascinated with America. Washington especially surprised me with its beauty. The way trees and green things are combined with beautiful architecture is wonderful. I have seen that in no other city. New York we see always in the movies in our land, but Washington we do not know about. It is a great surprise."

Countess Orsini expressed her surprise that in a new country such as America everyone should be so enthusiastic about old paintings and antiques.

"In your country everyone wants old things," she said, "Americans come to ou. country to study art, they buy old furniture, old paintings. In Italy we want everything to be modern. We like a knowledge of the classics. We love old piantings and architecture, but we want to go forward. We want to learn about the new art. In most Italian homes today you see modern furniture. In fact, some people won't have anything designed before 1900."

A large woman's college, such as Smith, is unknown in Italy, and Countess Orsini is eager to begin her studies there.

Excited About New Life.

"All the way over on the boat," she said, "I have been so excited about this new life. I have wondered about America, about what my life at Smith will be like.

"American women are not so different from the women in my country. Over there women are becoming more and more interested in the outside world. And since they are not in business so much as formerly, no one objects to their being artists. Many women are successful artists."

Since, as she says, she has no husband, Countess Orsini can not say if marriage interferes with a woman's artistic career.

"But I do not think it should," she said, "and I know many women sculptors, painters and writers who are happily married."

Countess Orsini is a member of the famous Orsini family whose lineage dates back to the invasion of Italy by the Goths. The Orsinis have been loyal supporters of the Italian government ever since it was founded. An Orsini provided Garibaldi with the treasures needed to wage the war that united Italy under one king. The modern Orsinis are ardent supporters of Mussolini. The Countess has ancestral palazzios in Rome, Florence and Brattiano. Her mother was English.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

WHEN a doctor says a sick child must be kept quiet, he means more utterly quiet than the average mother suspects. This was brought home forcefully to me when I was taking care of a child who was running a fever; activity, the doctor said, would make his temperature run even higher. I read to him, cut out paper animals, and let him run a tiny automobile up and down the counetrpane, for surely this was quiet amusement. But his temperature rose.

When, with pneumonia threatening, we called a nurse, she took away the toys, pulled down the shades and left the patient alone. Heartless treatment, I thought resentfully; but I changed my mind when that dreaded temperature dropped definitely and promptly. Until then I had not realized that even mental sitmulation and mild amusement can be too exciting for a really sick child.

Now suppose the child has only a sore throat or a heavy cold; the doctor says he is not very sick but had better stay in bed two or three days. The first day he bears it pretty well, but soon counterpane games begin to pall. He insists he feels better, and mother lets him up because he nags her into it. But a child who is even slightly ill tires easily and succumbs to all sorts of germs if he is too active. As a result, complications develop.

So, even though it means neglecting the housework and serving a cold supper to the rest of the family, it is worth your while to devote the entire day, if necessary, to keeping him entertained in bed.

A mother's cooperation can go a long way toward helping the doctor in restoring a child to health.

Snakes Respond To Woman's Care

Bronx Zoo Curator Seeks Aid for Bushmaster.

New York, Oct. 1.—The bushmaster, deadly tropical snake at the Bronx Zoo, refuses to eat, and Dr. Ditmars, curator of mammals and reptiles, is afraid the snake is going to die.

A woman's care, Dr. Ditmars feels, is what his snake needs. Consequently he wants to enlist the aid of Mrs. Grace Olive Wiley, curator of reptiles for the Chicago Zoological Society. He believes she can make the snake eat.

"Mrs. Wiley is a remarkable woman," says Dr. Ditmars. "She has a certain intuition in dealing with snakes. Some of the most irritable types become calm under her care. She bred rattlesnakes. She raised the young and then raised a second generation. That sort of thing is very unusual, you know."

So far none of the dainty delicacies Dr. Ditmars has offered the snake have tempted him.

"We've been trying to feed him on dead rats which we catch over at the deer barn," he said. "It seems strange he won't eat, because bushmasters are particularly fearless in their wild state. I should say the bushmaster is a snake of mystery."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Has Washington Any Clubs Providing Social Life for Lonely?

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Are there any clubs or other organizations where middle-aged people might meet to get acquainted or for recreation?

Most every place seems to be for the entertainment of the younger set or for married couples. What could be done for those over 35 who might be lonely. Won't you please suggest something?

JUST LONELY.

* * * *

DEAR JUST LONELY: I have no first-hand knowledge of just such a club or organization; but I do have here a letter from a reader, in which she tells of chancing upon a social group in Washington which, according to her, is solving the companionship problem of many lonely persons. The letter follows:

H. M. D.

One Such Is Cited.

DEAR LONELY ONE: Having seen your letters in The Post, having lived in Washington nearly eight years, and being a widow of middle age, I can fully sympathize with you.

I need not go over the difficult problems of meeting congenial, respectable acquaintances. You know how it is, since your letters state it just as I have found it.

* * * *

Now, I am going to tell you of a small club I found by accident. It is called the League of the Larger Life, and has its own house located at 1414 Sixteenth street. This club has an average attendance of 60, and meets every Saturday night during the winter season, which opens the latter part of October. The program begins with a lecture at 8:15, after which the chairs are put back and those who wish to dance may do so. On special evenings there are other programs of music, games and specialty dances.

* * * *

One need not be a member to come and enjoy the society of sociable people. The people attending are mostly middle-aged, some married couples and many unmarried persons, including widows and widowers. A few younger people come and seem to enjoy the evening.

In the summer the league has a clubhouse at one of the beaches, and members and their friends may go there for recreations, getting reasonably priced accommodations. After going a few times to the league, I became acquainted and began to look forward to each Saturday night, and now I feel I have missed something when anything prevents my going.

"Gay Nineties" Style Is Back For Coiffures

More Grooming Required; Best Permanents Are Worth the Price.

By Frances Mangum.

FASHION'S pendulum in hair styles has swung back 50 years.

The ornate ringlets that graced the belles of the "nineties" are here again to transform the 1934 sophisticate into a demure model of femininity.

If she inclines her ear to the hairdresser she will hear his dictates of "hair up—off the back of the neck—high curls."

Because the hair styles have suddenly leaned toward the romantic, it is more than ever necessary to concentrate on the care and grooming of the hair. Unless it is glossy and fairly dancing with highlights the new coiffure loses half its glamour. And unless it is curled properly and adeptly it is difficult to train along the new lines.

First of all, look about for a good rinse. Find one that brings out the natural color—not one that changes brown to black, or black to red. Some women, particularly those with brown hair, will find that plenty of vinegar in the final rinsing water will uncover coppery glints hitherto lying dormant. Blondes may count on lemon juice to lighten their hair and give it a fresh clean fragrance. In most cases, however, a real vegetable rinse will set the hair aglow with color and light and keep it that way until the next shampoo. Such tints should wash off and be applied again with the rinsing.

As for the curls themselves they are more graceful and far easier to arrange if they are the result of a permanent wave. In looking around for a permanent it is always a bad beginning to worry about the cost. Permanents of the very best kind cost comparatively little.

Child-Bearing, Woman's Chief Role in Italy

Government Helps Large Families; Feminine Vote Cause Lost.

In a world in which old foundations are shaking and revolutions are chasing each other across the front pages, how are women faring?

In the rush of more spectacular events, what has been the fate of feminism?

Answers to these questions were sought from the foreign bureaus of the Associated Press. Following is the first of a series of articles on the answers received.

ROME, (AP).—Women under the regime of Premier Benito Mussolini are subjected daily to a tremendous bombardment of propaganda divided under four headings:

1—Get married young.

2—Have children, many of them.

Newly-Weds Aided.

To facilitate marriages the government protects their jobs, gives them almost free honeymoons and distributes liberal dowries. To enable women to marry young, the law has been amended to permit girls of 16 to wed without the consent of their parents.

To encourage childbearing, the government contributes to the support of large families.

Fascism rigidly protects the family. Divorce is not permitted. Legal separations are possible, but may be obtained only with much difficulty.

The cause of suffrage for women is dead in Italy, and women have less chance to obtain the vote under Mussolini than they ever had.

Opposed by Mussolini.

In government circles it is said that the premier's opinion with reference to women in politics has not changed since his newspaper, Popolo D'Italia, Milan, said in an editorial seven years ago:

"We deny women the right to stand for election to political posts. We believe feminism to be one of the many democratic aberrations of the civil and political life of our times."

Although some slight progress has been made toward personal emancipation, Italian women are still wellguarded beings who, unless they are of the lower classes, do not go out on the streets alone. They are hedged in by conventions that an American woman would find it difficult to support. They do not go into business and very few are in the professions.

PILLAR to POST

THE MEXICAN polo team is leaving tomorrow carrying with it the prize that was the prime object of its long journey, the good will of the Americanos. The victory of the Army poloists over the Mexicans left everyone more than a little sad—even the members of the polo committee. On the eve of the last game the hope that the Mexicans would win was so strong that the committee members joked about it.

"How much would it take, Davis," one of the committee asked the captain of the Army team, "to get you tight?"

"Twenty dollars," promptly replied the captain, the outstanding star of the series, who made six goals in the first game. The hat was passed around, but Capt. Davis welched on taking the bribe, and the next day the score was disastrous to the Mexicans—4 to 14.

* * * *

It was very noticeable that during that game at least, the preponderance of the rooting was on the side of the Mexicans. Gen. Gilberto Limon was especially amused to hear two young Americans behind him shouting excitedly at a critical moment:

"Come on, Mexico, come on."

The weather was particularly disadvantageous to the Mexicans and their ponies, which are used to sunny skies and a very dry climate. There were six inches of mud on the field Sunday. The low altitude, too, has had a depressing effect on both horses and men, for they are used to playing in the bracing atmosphere of Mexico City's high plateau.

"And, besides, we have had the advantage of playing polo at Meadowbrook with the fastest teams in the world," said Capt. Davis.

* * * *

Gen. Limon, who was in charge of the Mexican team, was like a father to his six brave captains. He lived with them at the Shoreham, and he and his charming wife had dinner with them nearly every evening, doing their best to cheer the players. He feels particularly sad because the Mexican public was not here to see how courageously his boys carried on and how hard they worked to win.

During the weeks of the team's visit here many coctail parties were given in their honor—with the Mexican players never touching a drop of liquor—another reason to feel that all the advantages were on our side.

* * * *

The climax of all the entertainment was the sherry party at the Spanish Embassy Sunday evening, which is like one of those "castles in Spain" made real, so beautiful is it. And the chatelaine is exactly the sort of person one's fancy might paint presiding over one of our "castles in Spain." Senora de Calderon, wife of the Ambassador, is like a story-book princess, an exqisitely lovely person with fair white skin, large intelligent eyes and shining dark hair in a coil about her head. She welcomed everyone in French, Spanish and English, as the occasion demanded, in the warmest fashion. Chief among her enthusiasms is polo, and the poloists who were present, the Mexicans in their Olive drab regimentals and the Americans in white serge riding breeches, booted, spurred and carrying crops, were the picturesque objects of her regard.

* * * *

Latin beauties and pretty Americans tried their best to take away the sting of defeat. Seen chatting merrily in Spanish with several of the Mexican players was the stunning Kitty Carr in a cocktail costume, of black crepe with a circular neckpiece that extended to the shoulders of gold beads, and cuffs made of the gold beads that extended nearly to the elbow.

Stately Olgo Sturtevant was there in an informal evening costume of black and red. Dolores and Alatorie and Carmen Aspe were three dark-eyed beauties who were trying to make the Mexicans forget that they hadn't won that day. Among others seen there were Mrs. Ana del Pulgar Burke, Gen. and Mrs. William Mitchell, Mrs. Daniel J. Carr and Miss Helen Carr.

Office Girls Find Champion In Employers

Charge That Emotions Handicap Their Work Is Disputed.

WOMEN are held back in the business world by their emotions. Brought up in the tradition that their chief job is to attract, to arouse an emotional response, they parade their feelings and flaunt their personalities all over the office to the huge disgust of personnel directors and employment managers. So writes Frances Maule in the Independent Woman.

"A woman who is used to gathering bouquets as the life of the party is likely to find herself receiving only brickbats if she starts trying to be the life of the office," the article says.

But how many feminine workers try to arouse emotional response as they take dictation? How many take time out from their typing to discuss social affairs? How many smile a shade too brightly when they meet the boss in the hall? And what about their inclination to be "simply crashed" when their employer criticizes their work.

When personnel workers in the Capital were asked these questions yesterday they sprang, every last one of them, to the defense of womanhood—in the business world as well as out.

Superior on Details.

"Why, women make more enduring workers than men do," declared William M. Loman, personnel director of the Hecht Co. "And they're more accurate as a rule. Of course, they're not as original as men—haven't as many ideas—but when it comes to detail they are actually superior."

"In every big organization there are likely to be a few employes who are inclined to give way to their feelings and emotions," he continued. "But I've found the number of women with this fault is no larger than the number of men. And for every girl who tries to curry favor with the executives, there's a man trying to do the very same thing."

When you get right down to it, all workers are human beings and the fact that they happen to be men or women has no bearing on their office deportment. That's the way George E. Scott looks at the situation. Mr. Scott is director of the personnel department of the Home Owners Loan Corporation's home office.

"Women are no harder to get along with than men in an office," said Mr. Scott. "One sex can take criticism as good-naturedly as the other. And both of them use the same tactics and give the same reasons when asking for a raise in pay."

Women Called Good Sports.

Another voice in praise of the steadfastness of women workers was lifted by W. G. Davis, district manager of the Equitable Life Insurance Company's Washington district.

"They're just as good sports as the men are," he declared. "They can 'take it' without batting an eye or shedding a tear. In fact, I think the business world would be better off if there were more women in it."

It was Mr. Davis who suggested Washington women might be superior to women in other parts of the country.

"I guess the person who wrote that magazine article about women being too emotional in the office was referring to the workers in other cities. We don't have that trouble here. At least I don't."

Party Killing Jails 12; Six WomenHeld

Others Are Sought in Harrisonburg Man's Shooting.

Jealousy Is Held Motive of Slaying; Darkness Shields Gunman.

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 1 (Spl.). With 12 persons being held in jail in connection with the fatal shooting here Saturday night of Gleaves Calhoun, 27, construction worker, police tonight were seeking others who attended the party at Mrs. Kirby Lam's residence, in front of which Calhoun was killed.

Police have questioned the prisoners, half of them women, for hours, but all deny knowing the assailant who is said to have hidden in an automobile and fired at Calhoun as he left the house. There was one report that Calhoun and his assailant engaged in an argument before the shooting. It was dark and those on the porch could not see to whom Calhoun was talking, they told police.

Jealousy is assigned by police as the motive. They learned that bad feeling existed among certain members of the party. All the prisoners deny holding any ill feeling toward Calhoun.

Police are confident they will get a description of the slayer.

Calhoun, a native of Bridgewater, had lived in Harrisonburg for 17 years. He will be buried tomorrow afternoon at Burketown, Augusta County. He is survived by his estranged wife, a 7-year-old daughter, his mother and one sister.

West Virginia Recovery Act Ruled Illegal

Circuit Judge Refuses Writ Involving Code Hours and Pay.

Welch, W. Va., Oct. 1 (AP).—West Virginia's NRA law placing the State's police powers behind the enforcement of codes was held unconstitutional today by Circuit Judge Beno F. Howard.

Judge Howard said the act is not a valid exercise of the State's police powers.

His ruling was made in denying a petition of Prosecuting Attorney Wilson Anderson, of McDowel County, for an injunction to restrain C. G. Killem, a sawmill operator, from allegedly working his employes more than 40 hours a week and paying some of them less than 28.5 cents an hour as fixed by the lumber and timber products code.

The State's NRA enforcement act was passed by the Legislature in 1933 and was based on the National industry recovery act.

Provisions of the National act were not involved directly in the case, however, as all of Killem's operations are in intra-State commerce.

Judge Howard, in sustaining Killem's demurrer to the prosecutor's complaint, said:

"It should be understood that the ruling herein applies only to the act involved (State industrial recovery act) and the provisions of the code mentioned. There is no dispute between labor and capital herein involved. The employes of the defendant, if not satisfied with their hours of labor and wages, have the right to bargain with their employer and agree upon such terms of employment as are satisfactory to them.

"This right is guaranteed by the National recovery act and it is not the purpose of this decision to interfere with that right in any manner."

A replica of the first monument ever erected to the memory of George Washington on South Mountain, 5 miles west of Middletown, Md., is being constructed by Civilian Conservation Corps workers under the supervision of the Maryland State Forestry Department. The huge base for the historic marker will be completed within the next few days and the entire structure will be finished by December 31, according to Charles Smith, Boonsboro, who has charge of the mason work. Above photo shows clearing of ground for the rebuilt base. The original monument was constructed in 1827 by citizens of Boonsboro from native mountain stones and dedicated in July of that year. Some years later the monument fell into decay and it was rebuilt in 1882 through the efforts of La Grange Lodge of Odd Fellows, Boonsboro. For the past fifteen years practically all that remains of the marker has been the base. The same stones are being used in rebuilding the structure which will be 30 feet high.

Tax Collections Mount in Virginia

Richmond, Oct. 1 (Spl.).—United States internal revenue collections for Virginia continue to mount, the September report of Collector N. B. Early, jr., showed today. A total of $12,788,947.62 was collected last month, compared with the $11,341,442.96 for September, 1933.

Early attributes this increase to better business conditions and increased collections of income taxes for the third quarter.

M. E. Clerics Plan Parley InBaltimore

Southern Unit's Annual Meeting to Open on Thusday.

500 Due to Attend; No Shake-up Reported in Prospect.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 1.—The annual meeting of clergymen of the Baltimore Conference of Methodist Episcopal Church South, will be held in Alpheus W. Wilson Memorial Church here beginning Thursday evening. The conference embraces a wide territory in Virginia, Maryland, West Virgina and the District of Columbia.

Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, of Charlotte, N. C., will preside. He will hold a meeting with the presiding elders Wedensday afternoon and evening. The bishop will preach the opening sermon and preside at administration of Communion Thursday evening. The conference will close next Tuesday morning in time for participation in the sesquicentennial celebration of Methodism in Baltimore next week.

In the Baltimore Conference, which extends as far south as Roanoke, Va., there are 208 active pastors serving 560 churches in seven districts, including Baltimore, Lewisburg, Moorefield, Roanoke, Rockingham, Washington and Winchester. In addition to the pastors, each charge or circuit is entitled to lay delegates and with these and representatives of various church agencies, it is expected the attandance will exceed 500.

There is said to be no prospect of a general shake-up in ministerial assignments for the coming conference year. Many stationed pastors were transferred a year ago, and it was said this probably will be an off-year for moving.

Then, too, a new financial system is being set up in the general church for the first time, and it was said to be the desire of church authorities to return pastors to present charges where possible in order that the system may be inaugurated by ministers familiar with local conditions.

Reports to be made to the conference are expected to show a healthy growth in membership, financial obligations well maintained and a deepening of interest in the spiritual life of the church.

Court of Appeals Convenes Today

89 Cases Listed for Action in Annapolis.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 1 (Spl.).—Judges of the Maryland Court of Appeals assembled in Annapolis today preparatory for the opening of the October term tomorrow. The docket contains 89 appeals, a small number compared to the average fall term.

Among the more important cases to be heard is that of the State against Emory L. Coblentz, of Frederick, former president of the closed Central Trust Co., which has been in the courts for two years. Coblentz was indicted on charges of fraudulent corporate representations, after the trust company went into receivership, carrying with it several allied banks in western Maryland. The indictment was quashed in the criminal court of Baltimore several months ago.

More than 50 young men and women who recently qualified in the State Bar Association examinations, will be admitted to practice in ceremonies before the court October 10.

'Trusty' and Forger Indicted In Lynchburg Jail Delivery

Grand Jury Will Resume Probe of Prison Breaks This Morning.

Lynchburg, Va., Oct. 1 (AP).—The October grand jury of Corporation Court investigating the autumn jail deliveries was adjourne dat 5 p. m today upon the request of its foreman, A. F. Thomas, who announced the inquiry had not been completed.

When the jurors returned before Judge Aubrey E. Strode, they presented indictments against Warren Hicks, "trusty" held on robbery charges, and E. J. Miller, 67, a check forger, each for breaking jail. Hicks and Miller left the 150-year-old Lynchburg prison early in September.

After the spring jail deliveries, in which three notorious felons escaped, Sergt. Fauntleroy S. Tyree was indicated for negligence, but subsequently was acquitted by a trial jury. Sergt. Tyree probably will testify before the October grand jury tomorrow morning.

Odds Even on Tigers, Cards; Dizzy Dean May Oppose Rowe

Experts Feel Callahan Will Get Slab Call in First Contest.

ST LOUIS, Oct. 1 (AP).—Frankie Frisch's madcap Cardinals, as cocksure of world series glory as their own Dizzy Dean, headed for the lair of Mickey Cochrane's Detroit Tigers tonight.

They were a trifle exhausted and their nerves were slightly frayed as a result of their drive past the New York Giants for the National League flag. No one of them knew for sure who was going to pitch in the world series opener, but to a man they were confident of twisting the Tiger's tail.

Tumultuous Celebration.

"Leave it to us," promised Dizzy to the excited fans, who blew the town wide open last night with one of the most tumultuous celebrations St. Louis had ever staged, then the big fellow, who clinched the pennant yesterday by shutting out the Cincinnati Reds, 9 to 0, for his thirtieth victory of the season, looked up Manager Frisch to make another plea for the right to pitch the series opener Wednesday.

Manager Frisch was set on the rest of his starting line-up, figuring to use the same team that clinched the pennant yesterday, but he was still uncertain as to the wisdom of sending Dizzy to the mound after only 72 hours rest. He wanted to give his ace the assignment, but wanted him to get his chance at his very best.

Lean to Hallahan.

Although the starting pitcher represented a problem to Frankie, the wise ones tonight figured "Wild Bill" Hallahan would be sent to the mound for the first engagement against the heavy hitting Tigers. "Wild Bill" has had indifferent success this season, but he tamed the Tigers in exhibition games this year at Detroit and Battle Creek.

In the Detroit exhibition, the one Dizzy Dean missed at the personal expense of $486, Hallahan gave but five hits and the Cardinals won, 7 to 1. Most of the Detroit regulars were in that game. Added to Bill's success in those exhibition games is that fact that he ranks as one of the greatest money pitchers in baseball, having won three and lost one in the world series of 1930 and 1931 against the Athletics.

Carleton Speculation.

If Hallahan doesn't draw the assignment, James Otto Carleton, who has a side-arm curve that baffles the best hitters when in control and whose peculiar style of delivery always puzzles first-time batters, may be named. Carleton is noted as a cool weather pitcher.

Paul Dean, star freshman of the team, will be a sure starter all right, and could hurl the opener, but is almost a cinch to follow his big brother Dizzy. Bill Walker is the other sure starter, giving Frisch a pitching staff that succeeded in ten shutouts—seven of them by Dizzy—in the National League race this season.

Rest of the Line-Up.

Orsatti will perform only against right-handed pitchers, being relieved by Chick Fullis in case a southpaw dishes 'em for Detroit.

Episcopal Opens Drills For Contest With Tech

Alexandria, Va., Oct. 1 (Spl.).—Episcopal High began practice today for Friday's game with McKinley Tech at Washington. The Hill Top team came out of last Saturday's victorious scrap with Eastern intact, not a single casualty marring the successful opening of what may prove one of Episcopal's greatest seasons on the gridiron.

The greater part of this afternoon's drill consisted of blocking, passing and a lengthy session of booting by Flick Hoxton, hard-smashing half back. Hoxton's kicks last Saturday averaged 50 or more yards.

Suzanne Lenglen Has Her Appendix Removed

Paris, Oct. 1 (AP).—Suzanne Lenglen, former woman tennis champion, underwent an emergency operation today at the American Hospital for the removal of her appendix.

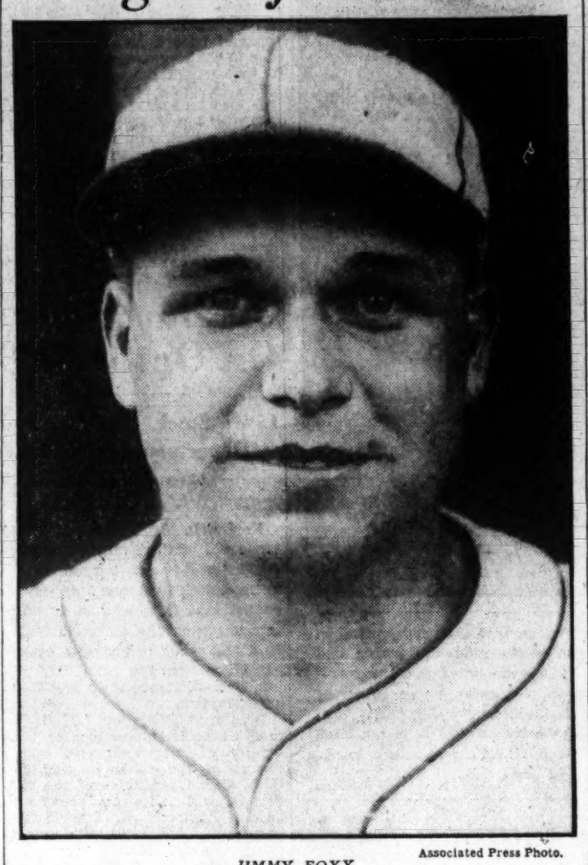
She was taken to the hospital after a sudden attack which physicians described as serious. The operation was successful, surgeons said, and her condtiion satisfastory.

Bill Klem to Umpire In 17th World Series

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—John A. Heydler, president of the National League, today named William J. (Bill) Klem and John E. Reardon as the league's umpires to work the world series with the two American League nominees.

This will be the seventeenth post-season classic in which Klem has acted as one of the umpires.

Foxx to Catch in '35; Signed for 3 Years



JIMMY FOXX.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1 (AP).—Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, today answered the many reports that his hefty slugger, Jimmy Foxx, would not be with the team next season by announcing that the first baseman had been signed to a three-year contract, and that he was expected to be the A's regular catcher.

Mack also announced that he had obtained Alex Hooks, first baseman of the Tulsa, Okla., team and that Hooks would be tried at first base.

Ever since Mack sent Mickey Cochrane to Detroit and Lefty Grove to Boston there have been rumors that the former home-run king would be the next to go.

Even after Mack made his an-

The Dean Boys Are Coming

By Paul Gallico.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 1 (Spl.).—The Michigan Central Station here, when my train pulled in shortly after noon today, presented an amazing sight. There were soldiers with rifles pacing the platform and at one end three of them were grouped over a business-like machine gun set up on a tripod. There were police, too, with short arms swinging prominently on their hips, and the porters looked nervous and ill at ease. Soldiers patrolled the tunnel leading to the station proper and the large hall of the station was filled with police, plain-clothes men and more soldiers.

A polite, but grim, young captain of the National Guard came over as a party of New York sport writers detrained and began to wander off in quest of taxicabs, and said:

"Gentlemen, I am sorry. A mere formality. You will have to step into this room for just a moment. If your papers are in order you will be allowed to proceed. I assure you you will be detained only a moment."

Puzzled, we obeyed. In these days of labor disorders one can never tell what is afoot. In the little private office he read over a list—Rice, Gould, Cameron, Miley, Powers, Gallico, Neil. "Hm! You men all have identification, I presume?" We fished out our baseball writers' cards.

"Now," he said, "there is nobody in this party by the name of—ah—Paul or——"

I interrupted and said that my name was Paul. Two soldiers immediately stepped to my side, but made no further move. "Paul or Jerome Dean?" continued the officer

With a sigh of relief we assured him that neither Dizzy nor Daffy was in our party, that we were merely New York sports writers come to see the world series. The young captain relaxed then for the first time and smiled as he okayed our papers.

"Of course, we don't expect them at this station, actually," he said. "We figure they'll come in at the Union Station, but orders are to take no chances. We are examining all arrivals. The orders to bring them in, dead or alive, and preferably dead. Ah—the gentleman who was named Paul—take your glasses off, please." I did so. He scrutinized me and then looked at a description printed on an official-looking sheet of paper. "Hm—feature and size not dissimilar, but you are too fat. I reckon you are not Paul Dean. You may go."

Asks About Jerome.

He escorted us to our cabs, and provided an escort of troopers on motorcycles. On the way he relaxed still further. "Is it true," he asked, "that Jerome Dean is 8 feet tall and breathes smoke and fire? You hear all kinds of rumors, of course. We're prepared. They say that Paul Dean always carries a pocket full of baseballs and that he can mow down an entire regiment with one throw. Well, good luck, boys, and take a tip. Better stay off the streets until this is over."

The streets on the way to the Statler Hotel on Grand Circus Park were practically deserted except for the troops patrolling at the corners, and the armored cars that rumbled slowly along the empty highways. I inquired of the cab driver—"where is everybody?"

"The Dean boys are coming," he said, "this is my last trip. I can't stand it. My nerves are too jumpy. They say that Dizzy can throw a baseball through a 10-inch plank and that he tears babies limb from limb. Brrrrr! I hope they get him. I wouldn't make this trip, only the captain sent along the escort. I got a family to support. I sent them up the Algonac until this scare is over. I hear Paul Dean killed a man in Pittsburgh just staring at him. They say he's got hypnotic eyes."

Fireman Save My Child

We swept down Woodward avenue with sirens screeching. Just before we caught sight of the hotel a woman threw herself on her knees, shielding a small child with her skirts.

"Mercy! mercy! Spare us," she cried, and troopers dismounted and quieted her. We drew up at the doorway and found Grand Circus Park an armed camp. The troops had thrown barbed wire entanglements around it. The fountain had

Thousands Mill Outside as Champions Hold Two-Hour Drill.

Detroit, Oct. 1 (AP).—The annual hysteria known to the national pastime as the world series rocked Detroit again today for the first time in 25 years as Mickey Cochrane's Tigers and the city as well whirled about to face the old familiar St. Louis Cardinals, headed by the new baseball heroes, the brothers Dean.

The Cards, with rubber-armed Dizzy and his l'il brother Paul, aren't due into the motor vehicle capital until tomorrow from St. Louis, where their last-ditch assault on the Reds finally decided the National League championship when the Giants broke up in the face of the indignant Dodgers.

Series Opens Tomorrow.

But tonight, though the battle call doesn't sound for the first time until Wednesday afternoon, the faithful were staggering around on their heels from the excitement of the first world series here since 1909, the first between two Western clubs since the White Sox scandal of 1919, the arguments over the possible starting pitchers, and the battle for seats at Navin Field that holds 47,000 but not nearly enough.

While the Tigers went through a two-hour drill inside, thousands of customers milled and massed in the streets outside the field exchanging their gold-plated orders for tickets they hoped would bring them a view of the former world champion Giants, but which they value just as highly even though the last-minute upheaval brings in the none too distant neighbors from Missouri.

Each day here there will be 20,000 unreserved seats sold in the morning, and the struggle for them looms as entertaining as the general engagement between the rifling Deans and the clouting Tigers.

It was still that today, with the odds even money and take your choice, and heaven be with you if your choice was the Cards and a real husky Detroit rooter happened to hear you.

From the Tiger side the Deans will be hit as the even-.300 slugging Bengals have hit everything they've faced in the way to their easy American League triumph, and the problem was merely how long it would take mighty young "Schoolboy" Rowe, the cagey veteran Alvin Crowder, curve-ball Tommy Bridges, burly Firpo Marberry, and possibly young Elden Auker, to stow away Detroit's first world championship.

There were all kinds of rumors that the rival master minds, Frankie Frisch and Cochrane, would top off their first full seasons at the helm of major league clubs with some of the fanciest, two-handed juggling any world series pitching staffs ever have encountered.

Diet of Deans.

The cold-blooded logic of the situation calls for Cochrane to start Rowe, who changed on a diet of boos from a sore-arm hypochondriac in the spring to the sturdiest right-hander in the league, winner of 24 games while losing only eight.

Similarly there seemed no other choice for Frisch than to put the Tigers from the start on a rigid diet of Deans, starting with Dizzy, following with Paul, and repeating the dose as long as was possible. Big brother's final shutout of the Reds, his second in three days, was his thirtieth victory of the season.

But Cochrane, raised in the master minding school of Connie Mack, patriarch of the Athletics, might lean toward the same sort of a surprise maneuver that saw Mose Grove and George Earnshaw left on the sidelines as Howard Ehmke, an amazing outsider, handcuffed the Cubs in the opening game of the 1929 series.

May Start Crowder.

Therefore he might start Crowder, as he did at the start of one crucial series with the Yankees this year, gambling that the veteran would get by Dizzy successfully and leave Rowe to tangle with brother Paul in the second game here before the battleground shifts to Sports-

Allegany High Takes Opening Game, 13-0

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 1 (Spl.).—Allegany High School opened its 1934 football season by scoring a victory over Boswell High, of Boswell, Pa., 13 to 0.

Lanky Carl Sterne scored a touchdown on the third play of the game when he went through left tackle for 46 yards. A pass, Sterne to Norman Gerdeman, produced the extra point. Later in the period, Sterne, on a reverse, went through left tackle again and tallied the second touchdown. From then on, Allegany took things easy and many substitutes were sent in.

Keyser Held to 0-0.

Franklin, W. Va., Oct. 1 (Spl.).—Keyser High gridders, led by Coach Dana Lough, were held to a scoreless tie here by the scrappy Franklin eleven. The muddy clay field handicapped the attacks of both teams. Keyser had two chances to score in the first period and reached Franklin's 20-yard line several times later in the game, but the local eleven successfully defended its goal line on each occasion.

Patchpocket Wins Jamaica Feature

Leads All Way to Triumph on Opening Day.

Jamaica Race Track, Oct. 1 (AP). After three favorites had fallen by the wayside, G. W. Ogle's Patchpocket brought relief to the form players when he galloped to a four-length victory in the Baisley, a 6-furlong dash that featured the opening card here today. The black gelding outfooted four other sprinters from the drop of the flag. Mrs. Clyde Phillip's Semaphore gained the place, two lengths before Calumet Farm's Sir Ten.

Patchpocket, which had not started since early in July at Arlington Park, was backed down to 6 to 5. He ran the distance in 1:12 1-5.

A fairly good-sized crowd attended the sport at the Metropolitan Jockey Club's home, which opens and closes racing in Long Island. Perfect weather prevailed and new flowers and shrubbery were in evidence at the compact mile course.

Houghton's 65 Leads Drill For Open

Kenwood Pro Shoots Six Birdies and 12 Pars; Entries Pour In.

By Dave Herman.

AFTER three gallant but futile bids, Al Houghton believes that now is the time for the host pro to win his own golf tournament.

Houghton indicated this yesterday just a few minutes after he conquered the Kenwood course with a blistering 65 in an informal sweepstakes that tounched off tune-up rounds for the National Capital Open championship scheduled Saturday and Sunday.

The Kenwood professional's spectacular score, cracking par by 6 shots, was his best of the season at his home course, was 3 strokes above his own unofficial record for the layout, and 4 off the record he set at Washington Golf and Country Club last spring.

Scores Six Birdies.

Birdies fell from his clubs with monotonous regularity on the first nine, which he covered in 30, 5 under par. He was splitting the pins all the way with his iron and putting deadly on virtually every hole. His birdies were made on the second, fourth, fifth, seventh, ninth and sixteenth. Houghton was not over par on a single hole, and he wound up with nine 3s.

Several of the local lads took advantage of the cool, crisp weather to participate in the joint sweepstakes-practice round. George Diffenbaugh, Indian Spring pro, shot a brace of 36s, while his amateur protege, Roger Peacock, snapped par with a 70. Others who scored in the low and middle 70s were Mel Shorey, East Potomac; Al Treder, of Manor, and J. Monro Hunter, sr.

Entries Pour In.

Meanwhile, entries continued to pour in for the big money classic. Johnny Kinder, young Asbury Park, N. J., pro, fresh from a successful defense of his New Jersey P. G. A. title, was among the latest entries. Kinder, of Hungarian parentage, was the star of the opening round of the 1932 National Capital Open. Stocky Johnny Golden, Noroton, Conn., pro, fromer North and South champion, and member of the Ryder Cup team, filed his entry, as did Willie Klein, the old campaigner from New York; Felix Serafin, former Pennsylvania champion, and a flock of others.

The big shots will start registering at the club today.

Noonan Marked Man.

A marked man in the National Capital will be Jim Noonan, Chicago pro, who won the Columbus (Ohio) Open Sunday. Noonan beat out Willie Goggin, San Francisco pro, by two shots, with a last-round rally of 70 that was featured by an eagle deuce on the sixty-seventh hole—a deuce that enabled him to win. Noonan, long considered a sturdy tournament player, will be one of at least ten Windy City golfers expected here. Horton Smith and Tommy Armour are the other Chicago bright lights returning for their fourth tournament.

Champion Runyan plans to come here from White Plains, N. Y., on Thursday with his wife.

Houghton's card with par:

Out—Par.....	4	4	4	5	3	4	3	4—	35
Houghton.....	4	3	4	5	4	4	3	4—	30
In—Par.....	4	4	5	4	4	3	4	4—	36—71

Eddie J. Is Victorious At Detroit, Pays $7.80

Detroit, Oct. 1 (AP).—Idling along until the time was right, Eddie J made a winning challenge after entering the stretch today to win the featured fifth race at the Detroit Fair Grounds.

He beat South Bend by a length, with Stay three-quarters of a length farther back, in their place. Flutter Up, coupled with South Bend as the Gay & Young entry, finished fourth. Slipup set the early pace, leading into the stretch, and then faded to cross the finish line among the also-rans. Win tickets on Eddie J were worth $7.80 for $2.

Three V. M. I. Regulars Injured in Duke Game

Lexington, Va., Oct. 1 (AP).—Injuries received in the Duke game Saturday resulted in three V. M. I. regulars being out of uniform today. They are Carlyle Lowe, tackle; Jim Farley, guard, and Charlie Hancock, end.

In a light workout Harry Hightower replaced Lowe, Bill Oglesby took Farley's place and Dave Kane substituted for Hancock. Players who did not get in the Duke game scrimmaged against the freshmen, with the yearlings taking the offense.

Colleges Hit Faster Pace Saturday

Notre Dame vs. Texas; Two Big-Ten Battles on Schedule.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 (U.P.).—Tardy grid powers will swing into the big pigskin parade this week-end, and by Saturday night the Nation's 500-odd football colleges will be playing full blast.

Their schedule, the first complete one of the season, sprinkles the country with important sectional, intersectional and traditional encounters.

The East, where most of the big-timers get off to a late start, should provide Saturday's banner conflict when Columbia and Yale, ancient rivals, renew grid relations after a lapse of 29 years.

Pond's Debut as Coach.

Lou Little's Columbia Lions, Rose Bowl victors in 1933, are favored over the Elis who make their debut under a brand new coaching staff, headed by the famous Ducky Pond. This meeting at New Haven is probably the hardest opening game either school ever scheduled.

Fritz Crisler's Princeton Tigers, claimant of the National championship last year, open against Amherst which, in view of last week's 22-0 victory over Connecticut State, should give the Tigers a workout, if nothing else. The Tigers this season, with an experienced, fast, powerful squad, are regarded as one of the Nation's strongest outfits.

Harvard vs. Bates.

Harvard starts against Little Bates, while Fordham and Pennsylvania open against Westminster and Ursinus, respectively—all tune-up contests. Likewise the second games of the two service schools, Army and Navy. The Cadets meet Davidson, and the Middies Virginia. Manhattan attempts to repel Kansas State, and Friday night, Texas A. and M. invades Pop Warner's Temple team at Philadelphia.

Plenty of fireworks are promised in the Midwest, but three of the games stand out. Notre Dame, opening with Elmer Layden at the helm, launches its bid to regain prestige of the Rockne regime. The Ramblers oppose the Texas Steers at South Bend. Michigan, Big Ten champion, tackles Michigan State, and Minnesota, Big Ten runner-up, collides with the Nebraska Corn Huskers, Big Six champions.

Big Ten Foes Clash.

Other interesting matches are: Northwestern vs. Iowa, and Ohio State vs. Indiana—all four of the Big Ten. Purdue opposes Rice of the Southwest Conference, and Illinois tangles with Washington U.

Down South, Duke, Southern Conference champion, meets Clemson. Last week the powerful Duke brigade smashed Virginia Military Institute, 46-0, and should have a push-over in Clemson, which lost to Georgia Tech, 27-0. South Carolina, Southern Conference runner-

Guggino to Fight Izzo At Hunt Club Monday

Carl Guggino, Florida featherweight, will tangle for eight rounds with Joe Izzo, of New York, in the semifinal to the Pete DeGrasse-Tony Lopez main event at the Riding and Hunt Club next Monday. Sid Silas and Jimmy Reed, welterweights, will meet in an eight-round preliminary.

Guggino and Izzo recently fought a draw in Norfolk. Silas made his debut here in a game losing stand against Frankie Hughes at the last Riding and Hunt program of punch. Reed is well known to local fight fans.

Clemson to Face Duke on Saturday

Will Outweigh Foe in Its Second Game of Year.

Durham, N. C., Oct. 1 (Spl.). Clemson's great show of power against Georgia Tech and Duke's impressive beginning against V. M. I. have set the stage for what is expected to be one of the Southern Conference's finest games this season, when the Tigers and the Blue Devils meet in Duke Stadium Saturday.

The Clemson boys took the show from the highly rated Georgia Tech eleven, thwarting every running attempt of the Yellow Jacket ball carriers, and forcing them to the air to win. But for a fumble in the first period after they had advanced to the 1yard line, the Tigers might have taken the game.

Clemson will bring to Durham Saturday one of the biggest teams Duke will face all season. The line—big, strong and fast—averages a fraction over 189 pounds and the backs tip the beam at 179. They will outweigh the Blue Devils more then 4 pound to the man in the line and 8 per man in the back field.

Central Plays St. John's Today

Seeks First Victory of '34; Coach Tries Out New Combinations.

STILL on the scent of their first victory of the season, Central High's somewhat bedraggled interscholastic champions of last year, will make their third attempt to break into the win column this afternoon. With a badly trounced St. John's team as the opposition, Central is generally held to have a fairly good chance of succeeding. The game will be played at Central Stadium.

St. John's, not yet fully recovered from its 27-to-0 defeat at the hands of Western last week, appears only strong enough to hold the Mount Pleasanters to possibly two touchdowns.

New Combinations.

The 12-to-0 plastering which Alexandria High gave Central last week was said to have been just what the champions needed. Saturday's game with Woodberry Forest, however, disclosed that they had profited only a little from the Alexandria defeat and Coach Coggins was trying out several new combinations in practice yesterday.

The starting lineup will consist tentatively of either Groome or Whedon at left end, Kline or La Salle at the other end; Busch and either Munns or Kusch at the tackles; Chaconas and either King or Chaimson at guards, and the veteran Dunn at center. Capt. Don Dunlap is slated to be back at the field general post, with Johnnie Pistolas as probably one of the other starting backs. Richardson, Otis Sabatini, Wooten or Vermilion stand out as likely to get the call for the two other ball-carrying jobs.

Knealy Is Injured.

St. John's veteran center, Knealy, is not expected to be in the Johnnies' line-up. A severe gash over his eye had not healed sufficiently to permit his return to scrimmage.

Vogts probably will take the pivot position, with Sheaman and Kirby at guards; Casey and Horstman, tackles, and Pappodeas and Regis ends. Mike Simone, hard-running little quarter back; Barrett and Walton, halves, and Shead, full back, complete the eleven probable starters. Arindes, tackle; Avignon, end; Hewitt, guard, and Dunn, back, are possible alternate selections.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 1 (AP).—Manager Doc Prothro of the Memphis Chicks said today he expected to sign up with another Southern Association club within the next fe wweeks. "My connection with the Memphis Baseball Club has been terminated today by mutual consent," Prothro said.

3 Women Tie With 82s in Title Golf

Mrs. Vare, Mrs. Cheney and Miss Robinson Lead for Medal.

All U. S. Cup Members Qualify; 3 on British Team Fail.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 1 (AP). Playing over a course soft from rains and lashed by a stiff autumn breeze, three members of the American Curtis Cup team, victorious over a British side last week, covered the par-72 White Marsh Valley Country Club links in 82 today to tie for the medal in the 18-hole qualifying round for the thirty-eighth Women's National Golf Championship.

The co-medalists were Glenna Collett Vare, five times former titlist, who gave birth to her second child less than three months ago; Lucille Robinson, of Des Moines, tall and sturdy Western champion, and Mrs. Leona Cheney, of San Gabriel, Calif., who has been a championship threat since 1927.

Two Close Behind.

They finished one stroke in front of Molly Gourlay, veteran British links woman, and Mrs. Carl H. Donner, of Short Hills, N. J., who had 83s, two shots better than Mrs. Harley Higbie, of Detroit, who stood alone at 84.

It was the third time in the last four years that the fight for medal honors has resulted in a deadlock. Mrs. Vare, Mrs. Higbie, Maureen Orcutt and Mrs. Opal Hill tied for it with 82s in 1931. Miss Virginia Van Wie and Miss Orcutt shared it in 1932 with 77s.

The three pace-setters of the 64 qualifiers, who included eight players from the British Empire out of a field of 149, topped the performances of their fellow Curtis Cup players and the team's combined totals easily outshone the consolidated efforts of the British international team.

42 Strokes Lower.

Collectively, the Americans scored 42 strokes lower than the Britons. With three exceptions, the British team qualified all of its members. Those who failed to make the grade were Mrs. George Coats, of Scotland; 17-year-old Pamela Barton, the baby of the squad and one of the youngest competitors in the field, and Mrs. J. B. Walker, Irish champion.

Mrs. Coats blew herself to a 97, while the red-haired "Pam" just failed to get under the wire with a 94—one stroke above the qualifying maximum.

Mrs. Walker was eliminated in a play-off at 93 by eight players for two places.

Grouped With 85s.

Charlotte Glutting, New Jersey champion, Mrs. Hill and Mrs. Burt Weil, of Cincinnati, Ohio, title-holder, were grouped with 85s; Estelle Lawson, of Chapel Hill, former North Carolina and South Carolina champion; Miss Van Wie, the defending champion; Wanda Morgan, of England; Frances Williams, of Allentown, Pa., and Dorothy Traung, San Francisco youngster, had 86s.

Deadlocked at 87 were Marion Fischer, of New York; Mary Rogers, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Helen Schoff, of Philadelphia, and Barbara Stoddard, of New York, while a stroke behind them was a select group that included four internationalists, Miss Orcutt, Mrs. Frank H. Goldthwaite, of Dallas; Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., and the golden-haired Diana Fishwick, 1930 British champion, and 16-year-old Betty Jameson, of Dallas, and Jean Kyer, of Detroit.

The remainder of the Curtis cuppers finished as follows: Diana Plumpton and Doris Chambers, the non-playing captain of England, 90s.

7,000 See Cabouse Score to Pay $17

Holds Off Challenges of Santerno and On Sir.

Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H., Oct. 1 (AP).—Mrs. Paul A. Shaw's Cabouse, an erstwhile sprinter which recently transferred his efforts to the distance events, provided the feature and the upset as he won the sixth race, one of the three features, before a crowd of 7,000 spectators here today.

Cabouse was more or less ignored in the betting, closing at 15-2 odds and paying $17 for a $2 win ticket.

He was hustled to the front by Jockey Franke Maschek and stayed there, holding off the challenges of Mrs. J. P. Keezek's Santerno, the second choice in the betting, and Lilliam C. White's On Sir, the favorite, in a stirring three-horse finish.

Noelwood, at $11.02, Five-Length Winner

Chicago, Oct. 1 (AP).—Moving to the front soon after the field was sent away, Noelwood, racing for Oros & Sigman, scored easily in the best event of a dull program at Lincoln Fields today.

Noelwood, at home in the heavy going, romped home five lengths ahead of A. G. Main's Wooly West, at the end of the 7-furlong journey. B. Parke's Chips was third. The winner, somewhat overlooked in the wagering, paid $11.02 to win.

Navy Expecting Hard Tussle With Virginia Here Saturday

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 1 (Spl.). The Navy football contingent is not taking seriously the gloomy reports emanating from the University of Virginia, and today the Middies launched a drive for the game with the Cavaliers to be staged in Griffith Stadium on Saturday. Navy scouts who saw the Virginians in action against Hampden-Sydney feel the Cavaliers did not extend themselves, preferring to take no chances, with the Navy battle in view.

Although several Navy players were badly bruised in their inaugural against William and Mary, practically all were on the field this afternoon and participated in some part of practice. There was one notable exception, however, as Bringle, who played with the plebes throughout last season and was making a strong bid for a wing berth on the varsity, suffered a fracture of the hip bone in the battle with the Indians, and it is announced he will not play again this season. Bringle entered the game late in the second period, in place of Dornin and his injury occurred in the second scrimmage in which he was engaged.

While happy that his charges got by their initial melee, Head Coach Tom Hamilton hardly appeared pleased with the work of the team as a whole. He praised the performance of Buzz Borries, who accounted for all three of Navy's touchdowns, but said there was considerable ragged work along several lines that must be corrected before the battle with Virginia. "I look for a hard game," he said.

Today's workout was devoted almost entirely to correcting faults noted in the William and Mary fracas, but a stiff scrimmage is scheduled for tomorrow and again on Wednesday.

Arrangements were being completed today for the trip of the regiment of midshipmen to Washington. According to plans the junket will consume scarcely more than time for transportation, with perhaps an hour or so for luncheon before the game. Special trains will convey the blue-clad lads, leaving Annapolis at 10:45 a. m. Saturday. Box luncheons will be taken along, as usual, and the return home will be started as soon after the end of the game as possible. The Middies will march to Griffith Stadium and put on a drill on the playing field before resuming seats in the stands.

Virginia In Fine Form.

University, Va., Oct. 1 (AP).—The Cavaliers today spent an hour checking up on last Saturday's engagement with Hamden-Sydney before beginning to point for the Navy game next Saturday. Coach Tebell had the teams rehearse plays used Saturday, pointing out mistakes and revising where weaknesses had appeared. The squad generally seemed in fine shape.

Heurich Brewers Defeat G. P. O., 3-1, to Win Post Interleague Week-Day Title

4,500 Watch Final Game Of Series

Winners Score All Runs Without Hit in Fifth; Scrivener Hurls.

BEHIND the masterful pitching of the left-handed Archie Scrivener, the Heurich Brewers defeated Government Printing Office, 3 to 1, to win The Post Association inter-league week-day championship yesterday on the South Ellipse.

The crowd of 4,500 fans, who rimmed the playing field, watched the diminutive Scrivener and Frank Corkins wage a thrilling pitching duel, marred only by the wildness of the G. P. O. hurler in the fifth inning. Darkness halted hostilities in the seventh inning.

Again the Brewers proved themselves opportunists, quick to capitalize on the mistakes on their opponents. This habit has characterized their play during the entire series and oftentimes has been a determining factor in their four series victories.

Fifth-Inning Splurge.

Taking full advantage of Corkins' sudden wild streak, Heurich's won the ball game and the city championship, which went with it, in the fifth inning, when the champions scored three runs without the aid of a base hit.

Tony Britt and Scrivener were given bases on balls in succession and both advanced on Bill Radke's sacrifice bunt. Britt scored a minute later when Catcher Sole let one of Corkins' fast ones elude him. Bill Shelton was still at bat when Scrivener (the pitcher) and Ev Russell essayed a double steal. As Sole threw to second to catch Russell Scrivener dashed home for another run. Russell, in the meantime, continued to third. He scored later as Shelton grounded out to deep short.

The Brewers had threatened previously to score some runs through their own efforts, but some brilliant catches by George Mosedale in the vicinity of the adjacent diamonds prevented any scoring.

The Printers passed up several golden opportunities to break into the scoring, but it was not until the sixth inning that they managed to get a run. On no less than four occasions G. P. O. had the first two batters of the inning on the basepaths, but were unable to follow up such an advantage.

Scrivener Misses Shut-out.

In the sixth, Scrivener ruined his own chances for a shut-out victory when he uncorked a wild pitch, allowing Harding to score from third. Harding and Willner walked and Harding reached third on a tap in front of the pitching box.

The Heurich mound ace granted five hits, two more than his rival, Corkins, but his effectiveness in the pinches is reflected in the nine strike-outs credited to him over the seven-inning stretch. Batters of both teams oftentimes met the ball squarely, but were unable to land it in safe territory. Dick Knight and "Shorty" Gartland shared hitting honors, with two safe hits in three official times at bat.

up, engages V. M. I., and other Southern games bring together North Carolina vs. Tennessee, Virginia Poly vs. Florida, Georgia Tech vs. Vanderbilt and Tulane vs. Auburn.

The Pacific Coast, shaken by last week's performances of San Francisco, Santa Clara and College of the Pacific against Oregon State, Stanford and Southern California, respectively, continues its program with three games headlining the fray. Stanford meets Oregon State, Southern California tangles with Washington State and California opposes St. Mary's.

The big Southwest conflict involves Arkansas, conference champion, and Texas Christians, runner-up. Baylor plays Texas Tech Friday night. In the Rocky Mountain sector, Champion Utah entertains Colorado College; Wyoming opposes Brigham Young, while Colorado and Denver meet outsiders, Missouri and George Washington, respectively. The latter contest is slated for Friday night.

Hawks Football Team May Enter City League

The Brentwood Hawks, one of the outstanding sandlot grid teams of last season, may enter the National City Semi-Pro Football League, it was announced last night by Vic Gauzza, president of the league. The unlimited teams will meet at 7:30 tonight at Atlas Sports Store to make final plans for the season, which opens Sunday, October 13.

Coaches, managers and players of the National City teams are invited to attend a rules interpretation meeting tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at the Seaman Gunners' Recreation Hall.

Miss Faunce Is Lone D. C. Qualifier

Manor Club Star's 92 Puts Her in National Match Play.

CHESTNUT HILL, Pa., Oct. 1 (Spl.).—Winifred Faunce, District champion, shot a 92 today to become Washington's lone qualifier for match play in the National Women's golf championship.

Miss Faunce, member of the Manor Club, carded a 47 on the outside nine, returning in 45. She made the grade by one stroke.

Two other Washingtonians, Mrs. Leo Walper, of Kenwood Club, and Mrs. L. G. Pray, of Manor, failed to qualify. Mrs. Walper skyrocketed to 51—49—100, and Mrs. Pray withdrew after compiling a 50 on the first nine and 34 shots for the next five holes.

Wind Spoils Tee Shots.

A stiff wind played havoc with Miss Faunce's tee shots on the third, thirteenth and eighteenth holes, where she went two over par on each. On the 515-yard third, Miss Faunce required four shots to get out of the rough and trap, and finally three-putted, winding up with a 7. She knocked her ball into tall grass to the left of the thirteenth fairway, taking a 6.

Miss Faunce started back nicely with 5—5, even par, but from the twelfth to the fifteenth had trouble reaching the greens in regular figures. She finished with a 6 on the par 4 eighteenth.

There were only two bright spots on Mrs. Walper's card. She birdied the long fifth, and parred the 420-yard fifteenth. Mrs. Pray's only pars were made on the ninth and tenth. Miss Faunce meets Mrs. Harley Higbie, of Detroit, in the first round match tomorrow at 10:50.

Self-Help Pageant Praised by Street

To Be Outstanding Dramat Event, He Declares.

The self-help pageant to be held on the East Front of the Capitol at 7:30 p. m. Friday will be a demonstration of the ability and great talent of the unemployed, Elwood Street, director of the Board of Public Welfare, said last night in a radio talk

"This pageant," Street said, "will be one of the most dramatic events in the history of Washington. It is unique in that it has been prepared and will be produced by otherwise unemployed people who, because they had plenty of time on their hands, have been able to put more of their devotion and enthusiasm into it that is usually possible in any community project."

Rooter Faints in Line, But Gets His Tickets

Detroit, Oct. 1 (AP).—One loyal Detroit rooter, B. A. Marting, got his world series tickets today without knowing anything about it.

During the crush at the Navin Field ticket offices, where lines formed as early as 6:30 a. m., Marting fainted. When he was revived he found that a kind-hearted policeman had exchanged his tickets for him.

Burrell Rowe Three-Time Winner of Honors at Home-Town Fair.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

MEET the champ.

The champ is a smiling sort o' person, Burrell Rowe, jr., of Livingston, Tex., a half back on the George Washington football team. His is a peculiar title, won—not on the athletic field or in the ring—but at the Polk County fair. Burrell is champion cow-milker of all Polk County, Tex., and mighty proud of it.

Young Rowe, his teammates call him "Schoolboy," is a budding half back on Coach Pixlee's squad. He stands 5 feet 10 inches sans shoes, weighs 185 pounds, has dark hair and eyes and an All-American personality. Smiles all the time and he's got more chuckles than a fly has relatives.

Attended Fair as Babe.

Burrell allows as he's been a-goin' to the Polk County shindigs nigh onto 21 years—this is the first year he's missed. His mother carried him in her arms when barkers' raucous cries bounced off his tender eardrums the first time.

Burrell was a mighty slick youngster of 13 summers when he entered the cow-milking contest, but it wasn't until he reached the ripe old age of 18 that he won the crown. He held it for three years, letting it go undefended this season. Rowe filled a gallon and a half bucket in a minute and a half, pretty close to an all-time record.

The champ's dad operates a dairy in Livingston and young Burrell grew up in the business. He's done everything from washing bottles to collecting bills for the firm, and he loves it. Burrell's two brothers also are in the business. Four sisters complete the immediate family. Dennis, an older brother, was all-Texas scholastic full back in 1925.

Powerful Punter.

Burrell kicks and passes from the left side—but he's one powerful punter. He can hit the line an almighty lick, too, though he's a little better runnin' thet air ball 'round end. The champ's dad thought the boy was a little "teched in the haid" when he started playing football for Livingston High School, because he was just a little tyke then. But he made good at quarter back and distinguished himself in baseball.

G. W. coaches think the champ has a bright future ahead of him. They allow 'less thet boy goes plumb twisty come another season, he'll be harder ter stop 'n a skairt jackrabbit.

On the Sidelines . . .

By Edward J. Neil.

"WILLIAMS, Western Reserve."

Near the bottom of a column in a Chicago newspaper listing votes for football coaches throughout the country were this name and this school.

This, you must know, should have been "Willaman, Western Reserve," in reference to Sad Sam Willaman, who last year resigned as head football coach at Ohio State University.

I have no intention of doing a sad piece about Sad Sam. He is making more money now with Western Reserve and getting more sleep nights than he did in Columbus. But coaches do not always measure success by the amount of money and sleep they get.

Willaman's is not an unusual case. One year ago he was in the fight for the Big Ten championship; now he is having his name misspelled as coach of a smaller school.

Coaches are the pawns of athletic officials, and are to the intercollegiate world what the baseball manager is to the front office.

Officials and managers and coaches, who depend for their existence mainly on the whims of a gullible public, have discovered that the public will seldom complain about a change.

Schmidt for Willaman.

In Willaman's case, for instance, he is being replaced at Ohio State by one Francis Schmidt. In all due respect to Schmidt, he was practically unknown in Columbus when his appointment to the job was announced. Still, even before he came in and persuaded the sports writers and the school officials that he was an able, congenial fellow, the public was in favor of him.

And you need not go any farther than 100 miles from Columbus to find an example of the same thing in baseball. In the middle of the present baseball season, Bob O'Farrell was replaced as manager of the Cincinnati Reds by Charlie Dressen.

O'Farrell's record in the National League is outstanding. His record in his one year as manager of the St. Louis Cardinals was commendable. He had in 1926 been named the most valuable man in the league. He is a catcher, which is supposed to be a pass to success as a manager.

Win or Get Out!

But when O'Farrell's team did not win he was fired. No one claimed that O'Farrell's team would win, not even the men who fired him. And there is even some question that the owners of the club thought a change in managers would solve the team's failure to win.

But the club was losing money, and they knew that a change would prove to be a temporary stimulus, so they fired him, and proved that they were right in this point, because in the week following Dressen's appointment, the club played to more spectators than it had in any other week since the opening day of the season.

It is an extremely old subject. There is nothing new in pointing out the inexplicable actions of the many-headed multitude. The only thing consistent about the crowd is its inconsistency.

LaSalle Looms As Hard Foe For C. U.

Upset St. Thomas Sunday; Anthonavage Is Hurt in Scrimmage.

FLAMING scarlet jerseys against the lush green turf of Catholic University's stadium framed the Cardinal gridders in a pretty setting yesterday afternoon as they began work for their opening game of the season on Saturday. But they were not pretty words that fell from Coach Art Bergman's lips addressing the squad before the session. LaSalle, Catholic U's opponent, is not the LaSalle C. U. met last year, it seems.

Bergman and his assistants, George Vlk and Forrest Cotton, saw Marty Brill's Quakertown lads upset a veteran St. Thomas eleven Sunday, 7-0. This same St. Thomas squad that went undefeated last season until the final game of the season, when it lost to Davis-Elkins by a single point, found itself waging a vain, fruitless battle against the lightly regarded Philadelphians.

Pass Pair Effective.

Mark Knox and Capt. Ray Bahr, the forwarding passing combination that drove Catholic deep into its own territory last season, again proved its effectiveness against the Scranton collegians. Brill's backs displayed power on line plays and enough speed at ends to cause Bergman to brush up on the flank defenses.

Though Bergman has announced a tentative starting line-up for Saturday's game he intimated yesterday that several changes will be made this week. Joe Anthonavage, sophomore guard, suffered injuries in yesterday's scrimmage with Maryland and probably will be out for several days.

Lou Little Sees Yale Victory Saturday

Dissatisfied With Lions; Other Eastern Teams Prep for Games.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 (AP).—After watching his Columbia varsity go through a dummy scrimmage against a team of coaches and scrubs, Lou Little today said, "We're sure to take a beating from Yale on Saturday."

Little was much dissatisfied with the way the varsity back field of Tomb, Barabas, Brominski and Nevel handled the ball and with the interference on running plays.

West Point, N. Y.—Army began practice for Saturday's game with Davidson by drilling on the running attack which failed so badly against Washburn last week.

"I was satisfied with the Army passing attack for we completed four out of nine with a wet ball, but the running plays were ragged and disappointing," Gar Davidson, head coach, said.

New York—Joe Gallagher, 200-pound sophomore end, returned to work as Manhattan began its preparations for the intersectional clash with Kansas State. Gallagher and Elmer Taber each made two touchdowns as the varsity scrimmaged against the freshmen.

Hanover, N. H.—Despite Dartmouth's good showing in its opening game with Norwich, Earl Blaik had the Indians out for one of the longest drills of the year. For the first time since scrimmage started, Blaik had his squad at full strength. Dartmouth plays Vermont this week.

Cambridge, Mass.—An hour's scrimmage marked Harvard's preparations for its opening game against Bates. The varsity scored twice on the scrubs via the pass route.

Ithaca, N. Y.—Cornell's varsity went through a light drill with no changes in the line-up although it was understood Gil Dobie planned some shifts to strengthen the line before Saturday's game with Richmond. Dobie was openly critical of the varsity's lack of scoring punch against St. Laurence last week. The Ithacans gained more than 300 yards rushing but won by only a 14-0 count.

New Haven, Conn.—Secret practice was the order at Yale which opens against Columbia Saturday. Coach Ducky Bond kept the squad moving at top speed, concentrating on plays to be used against the Lions.

Millen was successful again in the second round, defeating Edward P. Curtis, of Rochester, 6—2, 6—1.

In the first round women's singles, Mrs. J. Potter Stockton, New York, defeated Mrs. A. Drew Arend, Wynwood, Pa., 6—0, 6—2. Mrs. Boocock won from Mrs. F. Grayson by default.

Fleet—Young Mr. Heatwole's—Basis of Tech's Title Hopes

HOLMES HEATWOLE.

ONE reason why McKinley Tech is favored to win the inter-high series is, when you get right down to them, the feet of young Mr. Holmes Heatwole.

Mr. Heatwole's feet are very ordinary-looking feet, but they do not operate in a very ordinary manner. In fact, their owner has the faculty of making them twinkle over football fields in most extraordinary fashion.

It is more than probable that if anything untoward happened to these particular feet, Tech would suddenly find itself no more of a favorite than Central, Western or Eastern.

All-High Half Back.

This Heatwole boy, whom his pals know as Blackie, combines brains with speed and shiftiness. Last year he was All-High half back but this season Coach Hap Hardell has shifted him to quarter back. The kid takes to the field-general post as if it were made for him.

Coach Hardell says his black-thatched pupil is one of the best high school open-field men he has seen in high school ranks. Heatwole combines his speed with an ability to pivot, shake his hips, change his pace and straight-arm which makes him a standout on the field.

Starred Against Poly.

A week ago last Friday night, Heatwole gave an exhibition of ball-carrying against Baltimore Poly in Baltimore which had him in the headlines of the papers in that city the next day. He reeled off 35 yards returning a punt to Poly's 17-yard line and then went over on the next play with a slashing, shifty run for the second touchdown of Tech's 14 to 0 victory.

Standing only 5 feet 7 inches and weighing 145, Heatwole is not as physically well equipped as many another high school back, from the standpoint of physique. But he offsets the handicap with his nimble ball-carrying tactics.

Heatwole, a senior, broke into the game in a big way in his sophomore year. Tech was trailing a strong Western team, 6 to 0, in the second quarter when Coach Hardell called on the new candidate. Heatwole went in the game and galloped to a touchdown from the 32-yard line on the first play. Tech finally won the game, 13 to 6, and went on to win the inter-high series.

Mrs. Dedicke Wins Medal With 94

Takes Army-Navy Honors by Two Strokes Over Mrs. Philip Cole.

MRS. A. E. DEDICKE won medal honors with a 94 yesterday in the Army and Navy Country Club women's golf championship. A 44 on the first nine enabled her to beat out Mrs. Philip Cole for the prize by two strokes.

Mrs. C. K. Wing qualified with 98; Mrs. H. Peabody, with 104; Mrs. R. C. Jones, Mrs R H Lee and Mrs F. H. Hedrick, with 106 each. The eighth top flight qualifier was Mrs. R. T. Pendleton, who had 107.

Match play will begin today. Pairings follow:

First flight—Mrs. A. E. Dedicke vs. Mrs. R. H. Lee, Mrs. R. Jones vs. Mrs. C. K. Wing, Mrs. H. Peabody vs. Mrs. R. T. Pendleton, Mrs. F. H. Hedrick vs. Mrs. Philip Cole.

Second flight—Mrs. J. A. Rogers vs. Mrs. S. H. Swain, Mrs. P. Strayer vs. Mrs. J. S. Upham, Mrs. C. H. Levy vs. Mrs. C. F. Clark, Mrs. R. P. Whitemore vs. Mrs. S. G. Crisp.

Columbia Country Club's annual golf championship will open today with an 18-hole qualifying round. Some 190 golfers will compete in the two-day medal test. Miller B. Stevinson, five-time champion, is fearing for his laurels, what with Luther Steward, jr., Congressional champion, and Martin F. McCarthy, Beaver Dam title holder, in the field.

Commander R. P. Whitemarsh won top honors at Army and Navy Country Club in the ringer tournament that was started last spring and ended yesterday. He scored a 26—28—54. He had 1 eagle, 16 birdies and 1 par. His eagle was made on the first hole. Commander I. C. Bogus was second with 64 and Dr. W. I. Bogus third with 57.

Out.....	2 4 3 4 3 3 2 3 2—26
In.....	2 3 4 4 3 4 3 2 3—28—54

Paul Runyan

(National P. G. A. Champion)

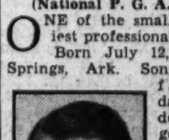
Born July 12, 1908, at Hot Springs, Ark. Son of a truck farmer and dairyman. Paul developed fingers and wrists by milking cows. At 15 he was assistant professional. Once worked for Craig Wood. Oddly enough, he defeated Wood on the thirty-seventh hole in the National P. G. A. finals at Buffalo, N. Y., this year.



RUNYAN

His 211 won the National Capital Open last November by one shot. Flopped in National Open after being installed as big favorite. During winter he won $7,028 in prize money. Averaged $1,400 a month as leading scorer of 1,000 well known pros. Averaged bit over 71 strokes in 57 rounds, earning $1.73 per stroke. Set record with 66, 67, 68, 69 in Cavalier Open at Virginia Beach last winter.

Last week he shot 286, with record 68 on last round, to win Westchester Open. Willie MacFarlane four shots back.

Runyan is not long off tee, but is straight as an arrow. Spoon his best wood weapon. Uncanny with approaches and putter. Known as "Little Poison." Married. Wife never misses a tournament. Professional at Metropolis Club, White Plains, N. Y.

Hole-in-One After 11 and 12.

Dayton, Ohio (U.P.).—As a golfer Mrs. H. W. Alexander may not be consistent, but at least she accomplished something difficult. After taking 10 strokes on the fifth hole, 11 on the sixth and 12 on the seventh, she made a hole-in-one on a 146-yard eighth hole. She used a driver.

G. W. Leaves Today for Denver

Will Arrive Thursday for Friday Contest; To Study Movies.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A HUSKY band of 28 missionaries from George Washington U. heads Westward this afternoon, carrying the gospel of Eastern football to the unbelieving of the Rocky Mountains. The particular destination of this group, the first Washington squad ever to venture so far West, is the University of Denver.

What appeared to be a hopeless task at first glance now assumes the form of a possible and probable triumphant mission, for the Utah Aggies only Saturday proved Denver not an unbeatable team. Reports filtering in from the Rockies, over whose gridirons Denver ruled in conjunction with Utah last year, were that Denver would be an impregnable football fortress this season.

Prepared for Trickery.

Though G. W. has a brand-new outlook on the game it is prepared for whatever the Pioneers may spring in the way of football trickery. Denver undoubtedly wants to retain the prestige it lost by Saturday's debacle and no better method could be placed at its disposal than a victory over George Washington.

The Colonials had a comparatively easy time against Shepherd College Saturday and smothered the Rams, 41-0. In accumulating their six touchdowns the players displayed a strong running attack that will be difficult for any eleven to hinder, and one of the best defensive machines G. W. or any other District school has turned out in recent years.

Work Against Colonials.

A long, 2,000-mile journey and unusual climatic conditions will be working against the Colonials. They will have only one workout in Denver before the game which is scheduled Friday night.

The squad leaves this afternoon at 4:10 p. m. and is scheduled to arrive in Denver Thursday at 1:15 p. m. A brief stop will be made at Clinton, Iowa, tomorrow for a 50-minute workout. Thursday night a two-hour drill is on tap at the scene of battle. Washington water will be used from here to Chicago, where 500 gallons of Chippewa Falls mineral water will be taken on for use in the Rocky Mountain city.

Movies of the game with Shepherd College will be exhibited on the westward trip, regular action and slow-motion, to point out mistakes made on the field. The team is to leave Denver immediately after the game, arriving home Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock.

Foxx joined the Athletics in 1925 as a promising catcher, but he was unable to work himself into the first string receiver because Mack had Cochrane.

Jimmy also showed promise as a hitter, and Mack had Foxx play other positions. In 1928 he was behind the bat, at third base and finally at first. His batting average that year was .328.

The 1929 season saw the Marylander permanently at first. He wound up the season with an average of .354.

He had his greatest year in 1932, when he had an average of .364 and led the league in home runs with 58.

Last year he led the American League in batting with an average of .356, and poled 48 home runs.

Sation Given 130-Pound Impost

8-Race Card Includes First Steeplechase of Md. Season.

By Walter Haight.

FEEL that tang of autumn in the air. See those brown leaves. October and Laurel—it's been the same for more than 20 years. Shortly before 1:30 this afternoon a frisky group of maiden 2-year-olds will bounce to the starting gate. As soon afterward as the starter can get them into alignment, the 23-day meeting of the Laurel Maryland State Fair Association will be under way.

Featured by the Capital Handicap, the day's program at the nearby course includes seven flat races and the usual 2-mile steeplechase, the first major track jumping event of the fall season. Only one race, the final, has drawn a field of cheap horses. For today, at least, the brand of horses entered tops the caliber shown at Havre de Grace.

Top Weight to Sation.

As was expected, the $2,500 added Capital has drawn the best sprinters available in Maryland at this time. George D. Widener's Sation, a sensation as a 3-year-old; Dark Hope, Star Porter and Only One were among the most popular in the overnight selections. Sation has been assigned 130 pounds, top weight for the sprint. Dust Girl and Happy Go have a mere 100 and 103, respectively.

The Capital Handicap is over the 6-furlong route and out of the chute. Billy Kelly won the first running of the opening day feature back in 1911.

A shifty group of six 3-year-olds has been named for the Anacostia, which shares with the steeplechase the secondary position on the program. This field competes over the mile-and-70-yards course. Rebell Yell, Precursor and Greyglade are among those entered.

Lord Johnson has been assigned top weight in the Potomac Steeplechase, which has drawn a better than average field. Spinach, the veteran ace, Blackcock, Rozell and Wrackon are the others.

Despite the fact that Havre de Grace went into the "red" to an amount as high as $100,000 in some circles, Laurel is hopeful of success. Since the depression began, Laurel has managed to hold its own despite losses by other tracks on several occasions.

Test of Patronage.

Purses offered today show an effort to keep the prize money at a high average. However, if the crowds and mutuel play slump, as they did at Havre de Grace, we can look for a slash in the purses. This meeting is the first real test of Washington patronage. Marlboro had a successful session during late summer while depending on the Capital for the bulk of its support. Timonium did well over Baltimore way. Situated, as it is, half way between these two cities, Laurel also should succeed.

Boxing Heads Set Amateur Gross Take'

IN a love feast which passed for the regular Monday afternoon meeting of the District Boxing Commission, the big bosses of biff yesterday reached a complete accord with the Amateur Athletic Union, the big bosses of nonprofessional biff, on the conduct of amateur shows in Washington.

While retaining the whip hand, the commission agreed that amateur boxers would be recognized as such only when licensed by the A. A. U., the various branches of the service or organizations of equal standing and status.

The commission further agreed to lift the $80 minimum "take" rule which is in effect on professional cards, taking only 5 per cent of the gross receipts. To do this, the boxing solons will appoint only one referee, one physician and one inspector for amateur shows, instead of the larger crew that works other cards. Boxing commission officials will be asked to work for less than the usual fees if the commission's 5 per cent is not enough to cover expenses.

The $1-per-boxer license fee will remain in effect on all amateur boxers for the present.

College boxing meets will be supervised by the commission and subject to the 5 per cent cut of gross gate receipts that is in effect on all amateur shows.

The commission announced that J. Miller Kenyon, who was appointed a judge when boxing first was legalized here, would see active service soon. Kenyon has been ill since his appointment, but now is recovered.

It also was announced that Carrol C. Dunn, a retired naval officer, would be appointed as an additional judge in the near future, probably next Monday.

Alexandria High Coach Fears Overconfidence

been turned off and machine guns were mounted on the parapets. Three-inch field pieces were posted grimly at strategic corners and war birds droned lazily overhead. A police officer came over with a squad of men as our cab drew up, but fell back when the escort murmured a few words to him. The word "Dean" was mentioned several times, and the officer seemed to be pointing to me and arguing. Outside the hotel there was a large bulletin board with a proclamation warning the citizens to keep off the streets until the crisis had passed.

As we waited while our baggage was being unloaded a radio began to blare from a nearby store. Mickey Cochrane, manager of the Tigers, was making a speech, trying to calm the populace. He said, "Citizens of Detroit, have no fear. We will take care of the Dean boys if and when they get here. We are not unprepared. Remain calm. I do not advocate the use of troops or other force. We of the Tigers feel that we are able to handle the Dean boys ourselves. Rest assured that we will not fail the citizens of Detroit in this crisis. If you will report to me or to Frank Navin at the first sight of the Dean boys we will take care of them——"

The Poison Dean.

The doorman said, "Hmph! It's all right for him to be saying that. We have our wives and children to be thinking of." They say that Jerome Dean has poison fingers and that everything he touches dies. You men from New York, is it true that his brother killed a catcher with a straight ball in St. Louis last week? We can't get any news here since all communications were cut off. God, this strain is terrible. I wish they would get here and end it all."

A police officer again examined our papers before we were assigned a room. We tried to see some of the city but couldn't get far. Jefferson avenue was shut off and gunboats patroled the Detroit riverfront and Lac St. Clair just in case the Dean boys attempted to land by sea. The newspapers were publishing hourly bulletins. The Dean boys had been seen in the lobby of the Book Cadillac and there was a panic! The Dean boys were coming by air!

The Dean boys had been seen on the outskirts of Highland Park. They had killed a cow and were tearing it to pieces with their teeth! The Dean boys had entered Navin Field disguised as groundkeepers! The Dean boys had attacked and taken Mount Clemens and were fortifying it! Rumors ran like wildfire around the town. The city was in semipanic and all stores were closed. At nightfall there was an alarm at Grosse Pointe and troops concentrated there. Mickey Cochrane made another speech to quiet the frightened citizens. Searchlights played ceaselessly over the skies and rocket shells illuminated the city for miles. And always there was that whisper on balanced lips—"The Dean boys are coming——"

Smith, W. & L. Veteran, Out With Sore Finger

Lexington, Va., Oct. 1 (AP).—Charlie Smith, veteran Washington and Lee end, has an infected finger and will be out of uniform several days, but probably will be able to play against Maryland if it heals properly.

At the Post . . .

With Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Laurel Race Track.

Whether you come in under the viaduct off the Baltimore boulevard, bounce across the little bridge after coming through the town or climb off the train, it's Laurel today. And it will be Laurel for the remainder of the month. That is, if you are horse-minded. Bennings, Inc., will be there today 100 per cent. Clocker Mike, Trainer Joe and Old Bill himself were out yesterday getting the feel of the popular course. It's the same old place, fellow. Lots of green stables. That big veranda on the clubhouse where President Cy Cummings likes to air the cane. The foliage along the back stretch already is taking on that splash of brown, red and yellow that has formed the background for the bang tails for yars and yars. All that is needed is the crowd and the cash that makes the mutuels hum. If you can't resist that betting urge, you might do worse than cast your support toward these. BILL.

First race—Airatrix set a fast pace for a half mile in a similar field up at the Graw. She backed up slightly in the stretch, but was beaten only two lengths in good time. Previous to that she had moved up from back in a field. A better timed ride today may mean graduation for this filly. Gifted Lady and Black Rose for the rest.

Second race—Candescent rested during the summer and then came back with whale of a race up-State, losing the decision by a half length. Defeated a nice field here last year and may win at a good price. Judge Schilling raced with success in New York and shipped here at top form. Our David has some good recent efforts.

Third race—Blackcock and Lord Johnson, both steeplechase winners in New York this summer, should battle it out for the chief award today. Both are fit and ready, but the 6-pound shift in the weights may decide. Spinach has not been jumping consistently. He won his last at Pimlico.

Fourth race—Pretty Night has a recent race that was a honey. Picked up the field at the head of the stretch and ran away with the purse. She must find racing room for her best effort, however. Satrapal and Go Quick are two front runners which should take a part of the purse.

Fifth race—Main Chance, a son of The Porter, is asked to go this mile and 70 yards route for the first time. Sprints indicate that he will be there or thereabouts at the finish. Won at a mile in New York but was disqualified. Greyglade is the sleeper here. Rebel Yell to take care of the others.

Sixth race—Dark Hope was behind Time Supply when that one set a track record at the Graw. True, he was beaten by five lengths, but he ran a fast race. Sharp as hands can make him. I prefer Dark Hope to Sation and that 130 pounds. Flying Hour is a brisk worker.

Seventh race—Unencumbered took two wins and a second in three starts at Havre de Grace. Needs no better recommendation in this field. Knight of Old and Flagstone for the other awards.

Cochrane, Cards Have Met Twice

Detroit, Oct. 1 (AP).—Mickey Cochrane's world series experience, all against the St. Louis Cardinals, is pretty much of a dead heat.

As Connie Mack's catcher with the Athletics in 1930, Mickey helped beat the Cards in the postseason struggle, four games to two. In 1931, with John "Pepper" Martin running madly on the base paths, Mickey went down before the Cards with the rest of the Athletics, four games to three.

The Cards can gain an upper hand in their own feud with the American League champions by winning this series. They have won two and lost two, winning from the Yankees four games to three, in 1926, and losing to the Yanks four straight in 1928, as well as splitting with the A's.

Youth Is Winner in Auditorium Feature

Covelli Wins Over Paul On Points

Fomer N. B. A. Champ Bows to His Youthful Rival.

By Bill McCormick.

FRANKIE COVELLI, the Brooklyn bombardier, trudged several steps higher on the cruel machine that is the fistic treadmill at the expense of Tommy Paul, former National Boxing Association featherweight champion, in a rousing ten-round bout at the Auditorium last night. In nudging Paul from his ranking as eighth featherweight contender, SCovelli took a decision that was unanimous, not only with the duly accredited officials of the boxing commission, but with the scant crowd of 1,600 as well.

Youth, a burning desire to throw firsts and a slightly superior left hand, were the noly advantages the 21-year-old winner had over his fight-weary opponent. Any one of the three might have ben advantage enough to win the fight. All three together were invincible.

Jack Enis, Washington middleweight, outfumbled Bob Turner, of Norfolk, in a sluggish eight-round semifinal which was as boring as a kiddies' radio review to a first-string Broadway dramatic critic.

Enis had the speed and skill and Turner had the punch, but their styles were such that neither could show to best advantage. Turner could not get set to throw his rollicking right and Enis was unable to inflict undue damage on belting Bob. An interlude from the massive auditorium pipe organ would have been a relief—and a proper setting. Enis' win of the prize waltz was unanimous.

Dominick Nicco, New York noggin-knocker, won on a third-round technical knockout from Eddie Burl, Jacksonville featherweight, in a furious preliminary scheduled for six rounds. Burl had a slight margin when Nicco opened a deep gash over his left eye with a swooping right in the third round. After the round Burl's seconds asked that the fight be stopped and Referee Charley Reynolds complied.

Leroy Dougan, the venerable Arkansas toy bulldog, soundly trounced a young up-State by the name of Mike Groves to take a unanimous decision in a hair-raising six-rounder.

Hoyas Don New Uniforms in Practice

The Hoyas paraded in their new uniforms—Confederate gray jerseys and stockings, with gold knitted, form-fitting panties—a smart looking garb, while photographers snapped their pictures for the official program.

But there was some news emanating from the workout. Coach Jack Hagerty announced his starting line-up, though he admitted it is subject to change without notice. As the matter now stands Del Vechio and Chappa will play ends; Downer and Lynch, tackles; Sauer and Pearson, guards; Williamson, center; Parcells, quarterback; Herron and Saverine, halfbacks; and Meglin fullback.

Thursday night the team will hold its first night drill at the Stadium, though it will be only a signal drill. Hagerty has banned further scrimmages with the freshmen to prevent serious injury to his men before the season gets underway.

Ohio State's Gridmen Watch Indiana Plays

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 1 (AP).—Ohio State's football squad had its first look at Indiana plays today, and it was more than a glimpse.

Coach Francis A. Schmidt, who intrusted the chore of scouting the Hoosiers to none of his assistants, but took the job himself last Saturday while the Indiana team was running roughshod over the Ohio University Bobcats, brought back three notebooks filled with information about the intricate workings of the five-man back field evolved by Bo McMillin.

And all morning and all afternoon today the second stringers at Ohio State tossed the plays at the Buckeye regulars. It was the last of the two-a-day work-outs at Ohio, and Schmidt made good use of the extra time. The squad will work out only in the afternoons the rest of the season

Horse Owner Drops Dead.

Kingston, Jamaica, Oct. 1 (AP).—Charles Earle's horse finished first today, but Earle was not there to cash his ticket. As the horses came pounding down the stretch in a close finish he collapsed. When a doctor arrived Earl was dead.

Freddie Miller Wins.

London, Oct. 1 (AP).—Freddie Miller, recognized by the National Boxing Association of the United States as featherweight champion, was given an unpopular decision tonight over Dave Crowley in a ten-round bout in Albert Hall.

Anderson to Let Victories Speak Louder Than Words

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP).—Out North Carolina State way, where the football travel has been pretty rough for a year or so, they're expecting great things of mild-mannered Hunk Anderson, who learned his football from Knute Rockne.

But they—meaning students and alumni—are doing all the talking without much help from the genial head coach. The former Notre Dame star and successor to Rockne is not the sort to boast.

Nevertheless, he is hard at practice. Every afternoon he is out on the field with the Wolfpack—teaching the boys the tricks that Rockne taught him, drilling them in new plays.

Hunk saw many of the great ones come and go while he was a student and later the coach at South Bend. And he knows that football games are not won on predictions or on paper, but on the field.

"That's why I'm trying to get my boys to realize they've got to scrap for 60 minutes in every game," he explains.

"We are going to have a good outfit. I don't know how good. I think we're going to win several games this fall."

Instead of the legion from which he picked his players at Notre Dame, he will have a comparatively small squad at North Carolina State.

"Everyone of these men will get individual training," he confided. "I hope to have them well grounded in the fundamentals of the game and by that means I hope to develop some first-class reserves."

Anderson seems to be a sort of idol in the eyes of his players. He is not the hard-boiled sort who snorts and rages at the slightest kind of error. Rather, he is patient and even-tempered and a good exhibition of smart football brings plaudits.

Terps' Mentor Will Stress Offensive

Incohesive Line-Play to Center Attention in Dirlls for W. & L.

FAR from satisfied with his team's offensive display against St. John's Saturday in the opening game of the season, Coach Jack Ferber yesterday applied himself to the task of putting a kick into Maryland's running plays, Saturday the Terps face Washington and Lee at Lexington, and they'll need a kick to get by the eleven that upset Kentucky, 7-0.

Maryland's debut, however, was neither particularly impressive nor ominously drab from an impartial viewpoint. St. John's had a fast, well-drilled team that fought from the opening minutes until the last. Maryland's line looks potentially strong—actually it did not do so well.

Fine Back Field.

Faber has one of the finest collection of backs ever assembled at College Park to carry the attack this season, and with cooperation from the line they'll gain hundreds of yards. Incohesive line-play with subsequent weak, fallible blocking, prevented Maryland from gaining as it should Saturday. When the play went to the left, St. John's linemen poured through from the right and pulled the runner down from behind and vice versa. Often the runner's interference vanished in thin air as if whisked away by some magical power.

But Faber can take heart in the fact that the line is busy when there is defensive work to be done. St. John's did not make a first down until late in the final period when little Everett Smith reeled off two in a row, and as noted above, St. John's was not exactly a set-up.

Is Expert Punter.

Backing up the line play was a beautiful brand of punting supplied by Coleman Headley, a sophomore half back. Headley kicked 'em high, wide and usually out on the 5 or 10 yard line. He placed them with a precision that was marvelous to behold, and they were long, high punts. Undoubtedly he will be an invaluable player to Maryland when it finds itself backed up on its own goal line.

Norwood Sothoron, the fleet quarter back who directed the team, must not be overlooked, either. Sothoron, after a year on the sidelines, worked like a veteran on the soggy field and contributed some brilliant individual work. At the pace he traveled Saturday he should take rank, if not outshine, the highly regarded Earl Widmyer.

Window-Breaking Reward in Series

Roscoe Karns and Director Settle Argument.

Hollywood, Oct. 1 (AP). — Roscoe Karns, comedian, broke the stilly silence of a movie set today with high praise for the Detroit Tigers. Alexander Hall, director, a St. Louis Cardinal fan, took exception. One remark led to another until Hall outshouted Karns with this:

"If those terrible Tigers win you can break every window in my house."

They compromised to the point where the winner was given the privilege of hurling six baseballs at the window's of the loser's house at the distance from the pitcher's box to the home plate—60 feet 6 inches.

Stoefen 2-Set Winner In Pacific Tournament

Berkeley, Calif., Oct. 1 (AP).—Fred Perry, England's world champion tennis player moved into the third round of the Pacific oCast tournament here today without lifting his racquet. His prospective second round opponent, Robert Braly, of Los Angeles, defaulted. Lester Stoefen, Los Angeles, American Davis cupper, defeated Con Chamberlain, San Francisco, 6—4, 9—7.

In a first round women's singles match, Miss Betty Nuthall, England, won from Elsie Gable, San Francisco, 6—4, 7—5. Another English star, Miss aKtherine Stammers took an easy second round match from Claire Buckner, Hanford, 6—1, 6—1.

Capital Fan Recalls Detroit's Defeat of Cards in '87 Series

IF, as the saying goes, history repeats, the Detroit Tigers will beat the St. Louis Cardinals in the world series of 1934.

To find the precedent, you'll have to turn back the clock 47 years, but that matter already has been attended to by Brig. Gen. George C. Shaw, U. S. A., retired, a long-time resident of Washington.

Gen. Shaw, in a letter to The Post yesterday, relates how he sat in on that memorable 15-game world series of 1887, when Detroit, champion of what was then the National League, engaged the St. Louis Cardinals, champions of the American Association.

Perambulating Series.

It was a perambulating world series that year, with games played not only in Detroit and St. Louis, but in Chicago, Washington and several other cities of the two leagues.

Gen. Shaw, living here at the Army and Navy Club, recalls the series vividly. His letter to The Post follows:

"In view of the approaching world series between Detroit (American League) and St. Louis (National League)) for the world championship, I recall with much pleasure a similar series 47 years ago, in 1887, between Detroit (National League) and St. Louis (American Association, now American League), which Deroit won.

"Will history be repeated?

Lived in Detroit.

"I lived in Detroit at that time and saw many of the games played by the famous Detroit team of 1886 and 1887.

"In 1887 the Detroit team consisted of Dan Brouthers, first base; George Dunlap, second base; Jack Rowe, shortstop; Jim (Deacon) White, third base; Sam Thompson, right field; Ned Hanlon, center field and Hardy Richardson, left field.

"Batteries—Charles (Lady) Baldwin, pitcher, and Bennett, catcher; Getzein, pitcher, and Charles Ganzel, catcher. It is possible Detroit had a third pitcher, but I don't recall his name.

"The only St. Louis players I remember are Latham, third base, and Comiskey, first base.

"The world series consisted of 15 games and was played in various cities, including Washington.

"The first game was in St. Louis and St. Louis won. The second was in Chicago and Detroit won; the third was in Detroit and, as they came there with the score a tie, the whole city poured out to see the game.

Cards Won Opener.

"I was one of those present. The stands, wooden one-story affairs, would seat 10,000 people, which was a big crowd for a city of 100,000, which was Detroit in those days.

"The game played on a cold October day with a bit of snow in the air was most exciting and went thirteen innings before Detroit finally won, 2-1.

"Old 'Deacon' White won the game all by himself. He went high in the air and made a one-handed stop of a hot liner along about the tenth with men on bases that saved a couple of runs and then in the thirteenth made the hit that brought in the winning run.

Likened to Ruth.

"The old 'Deacon' was a great ball player, a sort of Babe Ruth of those days as far as the kids were concerned.

"I lived near the park and White lived across the street and some of the other players lived with him. Every night after supper they all would come to the park and bat out flies and grounders for the boys in the neighborhood.

"At the end of the thirteen-inning game as we all were going out of the park, Baldwin, the Detroit pitcher, en route to the bus in uniform (they had no dressing room at the park) remarked regarding the St. Louis team: 'We broke them today and they will come easier from now on.'

"This proved to be true for the Detroits won by a large majority of the remaining games. The series ended, Detroit, 10; St. Louis, 5.

"So it may be in the books that Detroit will win again."

mans Park in St. Louis for three games.

"I won't decide until the last minute," was all Mickey would say about it today.

Similarly there was considerable food for thought in the possibility that Frisch might cross the boys and start his crafty veteran of former Cardinal series triumphs, Wild Bill Hallahan, figuring that the advantage gained in a surprise victory would leave the astounded Bengals set up for the speed a ! courage of the lanky fireball furies from Oklahoma, the Deans.

Porisided Tigers.

The Tiger line-up is heavy with left-handed hitters, and baseball theory concedes an advantage there there to southpaw firing. "Jo Jo" White, fleet center-fielder; "Goose" Goslin, the booming veteran of plenty of world series war with the Senators; Charlie Gehringer, belting second baseman, and Cochrane himself swing from the left side, while Bill Rogell, of the iron-man infield of Marvin Owen, Hank Greenberg, Gehringer and himself, is a turn-around hitter, favoring the left side.

Despite all these conjectures, however, the experts felt certain that in the end both Frisch and Cochrane would subscribe that ringing prescription for victory laid down by the Southern cavalry leader in the Civil War, Jeb Stuart: "Git thar fustest with the mostest." And in this series, at this moment, there seems no question but that the "fustest and the mostest" means J. Dean, on one side, and the "Schoolboy" on the other, a couple of the highest-powered youngsters baseball ever tossed at each other.

Hitting the Headpin . . .

DISTRICT bowling establishments last night launched their second week of league competition with all indications pointing to another flourishing duckpin season.

Charlie Bell, Convention Hall mhanager, announces an increase of 78 teams over that of last season. Seventeen leagues have already chalked up their first week of competition with three more leagues, Home Loan (Men); Public Works (Men), and Public Works (Women) due to strat this week. On Tuesday's the hall's schedule shows continuous rolling with the Income Tax and Herald Leagues in the afternoon and the Veterans Bureau, East Washington Church, Nation Wide and Hebrew Inter-Club Leagues mauling the maples at night.

Twenty-one league sare making their bow at the Arcadia alleys. Starting this week are the Civics Club, Federal Trade Commission and the Reconstruction Finance (mens) Leagues, bringing the total of the leagues now in competition up to 15.

Bill Wood at the Lucky Strike alleys has announced an entry of 25 leagues so far for the season, with indicatoins pointing to the addition of a few more in the near future. Sixteen leagues have already felt the swing of the competitive spirit. Making their initial plunge this week are the Western Union, Eastern Star Ladies, General Counsel, Odd Fellows, Off Record, Catholic Ladies and Daily News Leagues.

Astor Clarke is again showing signs o fthe kind of duck shooting which made him one of the ranking bowlers in the country last year. Rolling with Investigation i nthe Federal League at Arcadia he collected a 165 game and a 424 set to establish an early season record for the league. In the same league, the Government Printing Office crew annexed the team honors with a 659 game and a total pinfall of 1,761.

In the Sanico League at Convention Hall, Tom Bradford (Jumbo Bread) set the pace for individual laurels with a 144 game and 396 set, respectively. Sanico Eggs' 569 game and Jumbo Bread's 1,611 set, topped teh team scoring.

J. I. Hogan (Red Circle) and Sid Solem (Condor) deadlocked for individual honors in the A. & P. League at Lucky Strike, each chipping the maples for a 146 game. Solem annexed the high set with 385. Red Circle's 545 game and Encore's 1,560 total, led the team scores. Iona and Eight O'clock Tea teams pulled up in a tie for first place.

Comptroller No. 1, topped the field in the Farm Credit League at Convention Hall. Charley Young's 133 game and 365 set boosted the team game and set to 567 and 1,508, respectively.

Ramsey, of the Adjutants team in the Navy Department League at Arcadia, captured individual laurels with a 141 game and 352 set. Commandant's 562 game and 1,599 set, carried away the team honors.

The Restaurant aggregation took command in the Diamond Cab League at Lucky Strike, aided by Puglisi's 140 game and Hopkins 368 set. A 564 game and total pinfall of 1,609 topped the team efforts.

The greatest slump in big league history hit Connie Mack's Athletics in 1915 after a phenomenally successful five years, and carried them to the cellar, where they remained seven years. In 1910 the Mackmen won the American League pennant, and again the following year. The close of the 1912 season saw them in third place, with Boston the winner and Washington second, but in 1913 and 1914 the Philadelphia team won two more pennants. Out of those four league championships, the Athletics won three world series.

Then came the slump. In 1915, 1916, 1917, 1918, 1919, 1920 and 1921 the Athletics finished the season in eighth place—in the cellar Even after that their recovery was painfully gradual. In 1922 the Athletics finished in seventh place, by the end of the 1923 season they had climbed just one more step to finish sixth, and in 1924 they moved up to fifth place.

By 1929 the Athletics were out on top again. In that and the two following years they won three league pennants and two world series.

With nothing apparently but instinct to guide them, golden plovers from Alaska make regular annual migrations over 2,400 miles of open water to the Hawaiian Islands—south in the fall and north in the spring.

How they can find their way over the vast expanse of the Pacific has long puzzled naturalists—and can only be attributed to an instinct of migration which is manifest in many birds and animals.

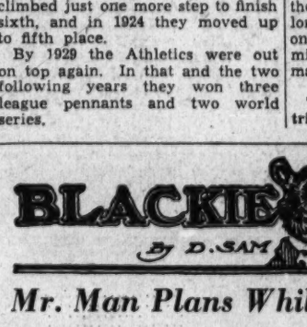
School of Religion To Open in Salisbury

Salisbury, Md., Oct. 1 (Spl.).—The sixth annual week-day school of religion will open here Wednesday, according to the executive committee.

Salisbury is one of the first communities in the State to have such a school. It had an enrollment of 485 last year. The school is non-denominational.



Mr. Man Plans While Blackie Sleeps.

That smells mightily like something burning over at Mr. Man's house, and so we will have to leave Blackie and his chums to take care of themselves for a while and let them play or plan, anything that suits them. They certainly won't be lonesome, anyway, for they always manage to fix up something that will keep them a while.

And now we are right back at that harvest moon that everybody has been talking about. When it opened its big golden eye on the world, on Saturday night, it reminded everybody that it was only a jump or two into winter time, and that they had better finish building up their wood piles, if they wanted any nice fires to sit around after supper every night, and that it was time to bring in from the field the last of the pumpkins, gather the late apples and bring in all such things as had been left. It might turn awfully cold most any day now, and so the very last touches must be put on getting ready for winter. That's what lots of people were saying on that pretty Sunday while the creek folks were having such a nice, snoozy time, and not worrying at all about a hard winter. And that's what Mr. Man and his wife were thinking about, as they sat out on the doorstep in the nice, warm sun, while Joe Reet was hopping about in the rose bush and the fig tree. You know Joe Reet is Jay Bird's partner, and he looks after his business when he is away.

If you knew Mr. Man and his wife as well as Jay Bird does, you would know that it takes a lot of talking about anything before they can make up their minds to do something and just how it is to be done. They think just about as slowly as Hee-Haw walks, and you know what a long time it takes him to walk to town and back. "That sky looks mighty red over there in the West," Mr. Man said, as he knocked the ashes out of his pipe and got up and stretched himself as lazily as ever Rover Dog did, "and I wouldn't be surprised if it should turn off cold in the next day or two. If it does, I think I will kill two or three pigs and take them to town. They have eaten so many peanuts that they are good and fat, and I ought to get a lot of money for them. And I could take along a few bushels of yellow yams and make out my load with rutabagas. If anybody would buy anything to eat, they ought to buy those turnips, for there were never any better ones. There might be room to take along two or three turkeys, too. It will soon be Thanksgivnig Day, and I know people will pay well for turkeys."

Mrs. Man thought the plans were all right, only she wanted to put on a few pounds of Mrs. Moo Cow's butter and what eggs she could get together. But they wouldn't take up much room, and certainly Hee-Haw could pull that little bit more. He hadn't been doing much work lately, anyway. And while Mr. Man went out to chop some wood and get things all ready for his hog-killing, Mrs. Man went back to the kitchen and began to work on some of her own things. And all the time she had her mind on the things she expected to buy with some of the money that she would get for all those things that were going to town in the wagon. They had plenty of good supper that night, and plenty of good fire to sit by while they talked over the hog-killing and the trip to town. And Joe Reet took over to Blackie's house plenty for him and the others to talk about.

Virginia Relief Cost Is Attacked

Governor Gets Report of State Auditor.

Richmond, Oct. 1 (AP).—State Auditor L. McCarthy Downs today reported to Gov. Peery that "the cost of administering relief has in many counties been all out of proportion to the money expended for actual relief," and that Federal relief funds in Virginia were in a state of confusion before April 1.

The State auditor has just completed the installation of an accounting system for the Federal relief funds. He said it was evident the State administrator for the emergency relief activities in reality never had an accounting department prior to April 1. This was due in a great part, he said, to the small size of the staff of workers in charge of reports and statistics.

In April, the auditor said, fo. the State as a whole, there were 44,945 cases on the rolls and of these 28,159 received relief. The relief cost was $154,166, and the administrative cost $75,416. The average relief cost per case was $5.47 and the average administrative cost $2.68, out of a total of $8.15 per case.

Miller, Rommell To Buy Club, Claim

Are Said to Be Planning Portland Purchase.

Sacramento, Calif., Oct. 1 (AP).—The Sacramento Union says Bing Miller and Eddie Rommell, formerly with the Philadelphia Athletics, will buy the Portland club of the Pacific Coast League.

The report comes from a source "very close" to the Portland club. Tom Turner, owner of the Beavers, is known to be completely out of the baseball picture for next year.

Yanks Vote Split Of Series Monies

Taylor Is Only Player Not Given Full Share.

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—The New York Yankees met today and voted their split of second place, or "consolation" money, the amount of which must of necessity wait until the world's series melon is cut.

The club voted full shares to Manager Joe McCarthy and every player except Catcher James Taylor, and likewise gave full shares to Coaches Arthur Fletcher, Joe Sewell and John Schultze and Earl Painter, the trainer. Taylor, who did not join the club until after the injury to Bill Dickey, will receive half a share.

Mark Roth, road secretary, was given three-quarters of a share and George Uhle and Harry Smuthe, pitchers, who spent a few weeks with the Yanks early in the season, will divide half a share.

Walter Owens, groundkeeper, was given $250. Fred Logan, clubhouse, received half a share and James Mars and Edward Bennett, mascots, will get $300 and $200, respectively.

Garrett Republicans Lead.

Oakland, Md., Oct. 1 (Spl.).—Registered Republicans in Garrett County outnumber registered Democrats almost 3 to 1, according to figures compiled from the records by Charles F. White, clerk to the board of supervisors of elections, following the tabulation of those registered the day before the primary. The official figures give the Republicans 7,053; Democrats, 2,399.

Culbertson on Bridge

Part-Score Bidding.

Most Bridge players take too many chances. While a certain amount of aggressiveness is necessary to intelligent bidding, many players carry their fearlessness to so great an extreme that if they were always doubled when they should be doubled, they would lose millions of points yearly in penalties. It is because there are too many chances taken as it is that I hesitate to advise making light bids when vulnerable. There is, however, one situation in which it is foolhardy not to make a slightly shaded vulnerable bid. This situation arises when the opponents have a part-score.

It is always to the advantage of any team, when their opponents are on score, to do a little defensive biding and prevent a very low contract from being good for a game. Defensive bidding must be tempered with caution, however, particularly when vulnerable, because usually the side which opens the bidding is likely to have most of the strength and there is danger of a 1,400 set or even more at even a low contract. Because of this danger attending defensive bidding, it is advantageous for the team which plans to defend in any case to get their bids in at as low a level as possible, thereby minimizing the amount that they can be set. A most effective method of bidding at the lowest possible level is to open the auction with a bid of one.

I believe that sensible application of this principle saved the North and South team between 600 and 1,000 points on the following deal:

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
Part-score: East-West 40.

	♠ J 9 8 6 ♡ K Q 9 7 ◇ 10 2 ♣ Q 10 4
♠ A 4 ♡ 5 2 ◇ Q J 9 7 6 ♣ J 8 5 2	N W E S	♠ K Q 7 5 3 ♡ A 4 3 ◇ 5 ♣ A 9 3
	♠ 10 2 ♡ J 10 8 6 ◇ A K 8 4 3 ♣ K 7

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1◇	Pass	1♡	1♠
2♡	Pass	Pass	2♠
Pass	Pass	3♡	Pass
Pass	3♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

South's Opening bid of one diamond would not be made by a great many players, because the hand contains less than three honor-tricks. The bid should nevertheless be made without the slightest hesitation when the opponents have a part-score. By opening the bidding South makes it possible for his team to find their best suit and be in a position, if necessary, to take a one-trick set in order to prevent East and West from bidding and making some such low contract as two spades, which, because of the score, would be game.

The actual bidding of the hand paid South far greater dividends than he could have expected. Because South bid one diamond originally, North was able to show his shaded heart suit at the level of one. When East later bid two spades, South's Raise of hearts had made it appear safe to North to sacrifice at three hearts, which contract would have been either made or defeated one trick, depending upon whether or not East obtained a diamond ruff. The rubber could then have been saved at a maximum loss of 200 points.

As it happened, West chose to bid three spades at which contract East, as Declarer, was defeated one trick, losing two club tricks and one trick each in the other three suits. He might have lost an extra heart trick had South led spades, but South, thinking North might have five hearts, was no sure that East needed to ruff a heart and did not lead triumps for fear of trapping some honor North might hold.

If South had not opened the bidding with one diamond, West and North would also have passed and East would have bid one spade. Now, if South felt it advisable to defend, his logical bid would have been two diamonds, and West would have doubled. Certainly, North could not have rescued on so weak a heart suit, and the hand probably would have been played at two diamonds doubled, at which South would have been defeated at least two tricks. By getting in the first blow South saved either a sizable penalty or a game.

Stocks Retreat 2.2 Points in Liquidation

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Stocks took the downhill path with commodities today while the dollar gained in international prestige.

Share prices crumbled esily under a moderate flow of liquidation. It was the first day of full Federal control of security exchange and some brokers coupled the thinness of the market with the new restraints on speculation, although trading has been at low ebb for months.

Movements in financial markets again made a pattern in reverse of the model familiar during the recurrent gusts of inflationary sentiment the past year and a half. Stock market observers studied President Roosevelt's radio talk last night without finding a satisfactory explanation for contrasting strength in the dollar and weakness of speculative markets.

Break in Pound.

A sharp break in the British pound, which was off more than 4 cents at one time, drew traders to the bear side of leading commodities, and excited talk of a restoration of old relationships between the dollar and sterling as a prerequisite to international stabilization of currencies.

The old parity of the pound against the dollar was about $4.86 and sterling at the day's low was less than 6 cents away from that level.

Ending hopes that President Roosevelt's address would spur security markets onward, the share list sold off abruptly at the opening and losses were extended later. The Presidential talk, however, evoked favorable comment from some Wall street quarters, which liked the move for a truce between capital and labor and its general tenor.

On Losing List.

The day's turnover was only 618,980 shares, but American Can, Du Pont, Santa Fe, Chrysler, General Motors, United States Steel, J. I. Case, Montgomery Ward, Celanese, United States Smelting and other prominent issues were 1 to 3 points lower at the close. National Biscuit was a weak spot. It dropped 1¾ to a new 1934 low around 26.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks yielded nearly half its gains on the rally from the mid-September low points. It fell 2.2 points to 70.1, the sharpest decline since July.

While uncertainty remained as to the longer-term effects of Federal regulation of speculation, brokers said they did not think provisions of the control act which became effective today had much to do with the selling. It tended, however, to make the market thin as the result of withdrawal of traders.

The market had rallied for two weeks without a setback of importance and a reaction was considered due on technical grounds alone.

Trade news did not help markets. Steel observers noted improvement in feeling in the industry, but the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated operations of the industry were down this week to 23.2 per cent of capacity, compared with 24.2 a week ago.

The first Western railroads to report loadings for last week experienced a moderate decline. The Santa Fe reported loadings of 26,782 cars against 27,108 the preceding week and 25,342 in the corresponding period last year.

Petition for Increase of Rates Brings Out Plight of Railroads

Strong Opposition Is Expected From Many Quarters; Outlook for Immediate Future of Carriers Is Called Impressively Grim.

By Anna P. Youngman.

Hearings began yesterday before the I. C. C. on the petition of the railroads for an increase in freight rates designed to add $170,000,000 annually to their net revenues. The application will bring strong opposition from many quarters. Shippers who face increases in the cost of getting goods to market will resist a proposal that would result either in a rise of prices for their products or a reduction in their net returns through absorption of added freight charges. The agricultural districts, especially the drought areas, will oppose the application of increases within that territory. It will also be objected that a rise in transportation costs at this time will tend to slow up business in general and retard recovery.

Finally, it will be argued that if rates are advanced, more traffic will be diverted to competing transportation agencies. Because of this probable diversion, in fact, the application for an increase in rates was made with considerable reluctance. The general counsel for the B. & O., John J. Cornwell, said recently, "Undoubtedly there is a question whether or not some more freight may be diverted from the rails if the increase is granted, but what else could the railroads do?"

Outcome of Petition.

As a matter of fact, there was nothing that they could do to secure a modicum of immediate relief from financial pressure except to present their petition. Even so, the estimated returns from the proposed increase would provide negligible returns compared with revenue needs. Whether the I. C. C. approves or rejects the petition, or grants the demands in part, the hearing serves a good purpose because it focuses attention upon the financial plight of the railroads and the necessity of speedy action, if they are to remain under private ownership and control.

The roads pointed out in the petition in which they asked for a temporary injunction against provisions of the railroad retirement act that in 1933 they earned only 2.18 per cent of the value of their property investment as fixed by the I. C. C., and but 1½ per cent in 1932. They also called attention to the 40,000 miles of road in the hands of receivers or trustees in bankruptcy, a larger mileage than at any previous time in history. At present a majority of the roads are not earning enough to cover interest, taxes and other fixed charges. Furthermore, their financial status is becoming steadily worse as a result of lowered traffic, high cost of materials and supplies, and restoration of wage cuts. According to the Bureau of Railway Economics, the railroads earned less than 2 per cent on property investment during the first seven months of this year.

The carriers estimate that the annual addition to their operating costs due to higher wages and higher prices of materials and supplies will amount to nearly $300,000,000. If the railway pension act is upheld as Constitutional, moreover, it will cost the carriers about $60,000,000 during the first year and still larger sums in succeeding years. Taking all these factors into account, the roads conclude that an anticipated deficit for the current year of $73,000,000 would approximate $280,000,000 if the basic rates of pay for rail labor had been in force and present prices for materials had prevailed throughout the year.

Solution of Problem.

It is unnecessary to pile up more evidence to show the necessity for increased revenues, but it is also plain that the solution of present difficulties must be sought in a removal of the chronic evils of the existing system of discriminatory regulation which deprives the roads of control over rates and costs, while subjecting them to the competition of loosely regulated motor-truck services, and waterways. A former member of the I. C. C., Winthrop M. Daniels, sums up the situation succintly in a recent article, "The Dilemma of the Railroads," in which he says "With wage rates largely rigid; with fixed charges beyond the control of managements; with rising costs for fuel, materials, and supplies; with a disappointing pickup in traffic, and with motor-truck and water-line competition growing daily more intense, the outlook for the immediate future of the railroads in the absence of adequate assistance at the hand of Congress is impressively grim."

The solution of the problem sought by those who hope to prevent transfer of the railroads from private hands to the Federal Government is a comprehensive program of regulation to bring competing transport agencies under effective Federal regulation In other words, equality of treatment for the roads is asked. With a comprehensive program of this sort in force, railway managements could further cut their operating costs and effect savings through avoidance of wasteful competition and elimination of superfluous facilities, which are undeniably great.

The only alternative to a program of self-help made possible and encouraged by a rational and just regulatory policy is Government ownership and control. If the railways are to be denied an opportunity to earn a fair return on their property investment, their owners, who are the holders of their securities, will eventually join the ranks of the advocates of Government ownership in an effort to salvage their investment.

Bond Market Moves Down As Sales Drop

Decline Hits Three-tenths; Trading Dwindles to $8,431,000.

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Bonds showed a disposition to follow stocks on the downward path today, although the trading volume dwindled on the decline.

Transfers totaled $8,431,000 par value, compared with $8,970,000 last Friday. The day's aggregate was the smallest since August 28.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate issues was off three-tenths of a point, the most sizable recession since the middle of September.

Market Absorbs Address.

The market absorbed the President's "Fireside" address to the country with mixed feelings. In some quarters it was thought the talk pointed to more conservative governmental policies. In others some disappointment was expressed that the currency and budgetary programs were not clarified.

The strength of the dollar in foreign exchange dealings, while viewed as indicating a further swing from inflation, did not bring in any exceptional demand for fixed income securities.

Small declines ruled in the Federal list. The turnover here amounted to only about $1,660,000. The Home Loan and Farm Mortgage issues were the most active at losses of 4-32ds to 5-32ds of a point. The called Liberty Fourth 4¼s equaled their closing low of the year at 100.11, off 2-32ds.

Rail liens led the reaction in the corporate groups. Losers of 1 to 3 or more points included some bonds of Baltimore & Ohio, Chicago Great Western, Chicago & North Western, St. Paul, Erie, Great Northern, Illinois Central, Louisville & Nashville, N. Y. Central, Nickel Plate, New Haven, Frisco, Southern Pacific and Southern.

Slightly More Resistant.

The industrials and utilities were more resistant, but International Telephone 5s were off 2⅜ at 59, Postal Telegraph 5s sagged 1½ to 44½ and Warner Bros. 6s yielded 2 to 59.

In the foreign section some of the South Americans were moderately reactionary under profit taking. French 7½s also lost 1½ points at 181½ and United Kingdom 5½s declined 1 to 116.

German loans were generally lower. Bonds of Belgium firmed.

Curb's Prices Recede Under Quiet Selling

Specialties Drop Sharply as Transfers Decline to 100,000 Shares.

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Prices receded in quiet selling on the curb exchange today. A few specialties dropped sharply on small offerings while losses of fractions to around a point were registered by utilities, oil, alcohols and metals.

Quotations were narrow at the opening, but a lower drift soon set in. The list continued to move lower in the afternoon and final transactions were recorded around the low points for the day.

Dow Chemical lost nearly 5 points. Midvalle was down 4, while Aluminum Co. of America and A. O. Smith were off about 2½ each. Fjardo Sugar sagged 2.

Declines of sizable fractions to around a point were registered by American Cyanamid B, Electric Bond and Share, Gulf Oil, Newmont, Pan American Airways, Parker Rust Proof, Swift & Co., Swift Internacional, Hiram Walker and International Petroleum. Creole Petroleum was resistant.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Business on the stock exchange was quieter yesterday. Giltedged securities held steady, home rails were very firm, and German bonds eased Kaffirs, Transatlantis issues, and home industrials developed irregularity, while rubber and oil stocks were dull. The market closed irregular.

Berlin—Irregularity predominated on the boerse today. After a favorable beginning, prices declined when the drop in German securities abroad became known here. The closing was unsteady.

Gossip of New York Markets

By Claude A. Jagger.

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Uncle Sam is receiving increasingly keen competition in the world cotton business.

Losing some of the world cotton business, however, is recognized as one of the penalties of boosting the price by domestic crop limitation. The danger was recognized when the limitation program was adopted, and if too much is not lost in the foreign market, the program, which has more than doubled the price, may be regarded as well worth the cost.

It is not possible to tell how much of the world market will be lost. Uncle Sam has lost the foreign market for wheat, but he had been selling only a minor fraction of his crop abroad anyway. With cotton, however, the problem is more serious, because roughly half the crop has for some time been sold in the foreign market.

Statistics presented in the current National City Bank bulletin show that while American production has declined sharply in the past four years, foreign production has gained. For the 1931-32 crop year, American production accounted for 63.6 per cent of the world crop, while for the current year, latest crop estimates indicate that the American portion will be only 40.9 per cent.

How much further this movement might go remains to be seen, but most students of cotton doubt if there are many places in the world where cotton can be grown as successfully or efficiently as in our Southern States.

Adams to Speak To Underwriters

Malcolm Adam, vice president of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., will be the guest speaker at a luncheon meeting at the District of Columbia Underwriters Association to be held at the Willard Hotel Thursday.

Ben Harlan, chairman of the program committee, announces that Mr. Adam's subject will be the selection of risks on the part of the underwriting agent in regard to their acceptability by the underwriting department of the various companies. The recent changes in underwriting methods will make this particularly important at this time.

President George F. Clendaniel of the association has several announcements to make regarding the activities of the association during the coming season. A large attendance is expected for the meeting.

The Dollar Abroad

(Associated Press.)

Led by the British pound, foreign currencies suffered a further lapse in terms of dollars yesterday. The downward movement appeared caused by seasonal influences and by month-end covering of "short" contracts in the dollar by foreign speculators.

The pound broke 4⅞ cents in New York, to close at $4.91¾, barely 5 cents above the old-time dollar parity. At the day's low of $4.91½, the pound was worth $2.90¼ on the basis of the old gold dollar.

The London price of gold advanced 4½ pence, to 141 shillings 6 pence a fine ounce (equivalent to $34.07, and bars valued at $2,106,937 changed hands.

French francs fell .01⅛ cents in New York, to 6.63½ cents, or within a small fraction of parity. Other gold currencies following the trend of the franc.

Canadian dollars declined 11-16 of a cent, to 2 1-16 cents premium over par. Japanese yen, which fluctuate closely with the British pound, receded .40 of a cent, to 28.70 cents.

At the New York closing price for French francs, the dollar was valued at a discount of .03 of a cent under par, compared with .16 of a cent on Saturday and .92 of a cent a month ago.

Boston, Oct. 1 (A.P.).—(United States Department of Agriculture)—Greasy combing domestic wools were very quiet in the Boston market. A few buyers were looking at the grades they usually require, but they appeared in no hurry to make commitments. Early cable reports from Australia indicated prices were steady compared with the close of last week.

Estimated receipts of domestic wool at Boston, reported to the Boston Grain and Flour Exchange during week ended September 29, amounted to 1,396,600 pounds, compared with 911,700 during the previous week.

London, Oct. 1 (A.P.).—Offerings at the wool auction today amounted to 7,184 bales, of which 6,736 were sold. The tone was good with withdrawals negligible. Crossbreds, including slipes, sold well to the home trade.

Wheat Values Slump Under Selling Drive

Roosevelt's Speech Blamed in Declines; All Grains Record Losses.

Chicago, Oct. 1 (AP).—Increased selling pressure that in various quarters was associated largely with President Roosevelt's Sunday night address led to sharp breaks in grain prices today.

Wheat and rye tumbled extremes of 3 cents and 3⅝ cents, respectively, with wheat reaching the lowest level sincee July 27.

Before the day was ended, all future deliveries of wheat were practically down to $1 a bushel or below.

Wheat Closes Unsteady.

Wheat closed unsteady at the day's bottom figures, 2⅝ to 3 cents under Saturday's finish; December, new, $1.00@$1.00⅛; corn ⅞ to 1⅞ off; December, new, 76½@76⅝; oats, 1½ to 2⅛ down; rye showing 3⅜ to 3⅝ loss, and provisions unchanged to 15 cents decline.

At no time today did wheat equal Saturday's latest quotations. On the contrary, May wheat contracts reached a new low price record for the season.

July contracts, in which trading started today, opened at 97 cents a bushel and finally dived to 94⅞. There seemeed to be a general lack of confidence as to the buying side of the wheat market, and, with weakness in stocks and cotton, liquidation of wheat future delivery holdings developed, especially in the late dealings.

Mills Good Buyers.

Mills were good buyers of cash wheat at the day's low point, and this helped to check the break in futures. Contributing to unsettlement of the wheat market as a whole, however, was the fact that the United States visible supply total today decreased only 699,000 bushels, whereas a large decrease had generally been looked for. Another disturbing circumstance was that none of the grain markets today were much aroused by bullish unofficial domestic crop estimates, although corn, oats and wheat production figures were all reduced, as compared with the estimates of a month ago.

Corn and oats, which temporarily showed an upward price trend in response to bullish crop estimates, gave way later, owing to sympathy with downturns of wheat.

Steel Operation Rises to 25; Better Outlook

Auto Buying and Building Projects Inspire Hope for Markets.

Cleveland, Oct. 1.—After three months of the worst drought in their business since the bank-holiday period last year, steelmakers enter the fourth quarter moderately encouraged by the outlook for more action in the markets, states the magazine Steel.

Contributing to this feeling is the further rise of 2½ points to 25 per cent in steelworks operations last week, responding to a more varied and seasonal buying; prospects for extensive purchasing by the automobile industry this month; acceleration in large public construction projects, and a firmer tone in scrap prices. Settlement of the textile strike also is a factor, this industry being an important consumer of cold-drawn steel.

In the major consuming classifications, only one—the railroads—fails to offer some hope of better buying over the remainder of the year. Agricultural demand is on the upgrade, equipment manufacturers purchasing considerable quantities. The retail market for automobiles continues fairly strong, with production of present models easing off gradually, and a little more demand for steel in preparation for new models.

Hedging and Inflation.

Thus far, only in isolated instances have consumers hedged against the possibility of inflation, by contracting for the full fourth quarter. Expectations of inflation are not yet sufficiently strong and general to overcome the present display of uncertainty in respect to prices. The trade, however, is wondering whether Ford's production and accumulation of $5,000,000 to $5,000,000 worth of steel has an inflationary aspect.

Furthermore, it is believed one of the basic features in the steel code is nearing a crucial test, with Donald R. Richberg, the new NRA chief, unequivocally opposed to price control, and apparently favoring limiting codes to trade practices, wages and hours.

Currently, the most active single feature in steel demand is represented by large public works construction projects, many of which are soon coming to actual purchase. These are especially notable in the Middle West, where bids are being taken on 18,000 tons of reinforcing bars for the Fort Peck (Mont.) Dam, and 23,000 tons of shapes and bars for Missouri highways and bridges. The first of the 12 reservoirs for the Muskingum, Ohio, flood control will be figured this week, the entire project requiring more than 10,000 tons of steel. Structural shape awards last week totaled 14,000 tons, compared with 20,028 tons in the preceding week.

Navy to Open Bids.

The Navy will open bids about October 15 on 3.540 tons of plates and sheets. Tank work is more active in the East, with awards last week and ten new projects up for figures involving a total of 6,800 tons of plates. Mexican National Railways are in the market for 1,000 box cars. Chesapeake & Ohio is to close this week on 250 tons of track accessories.

Scrap prices developed strength at Pittsburgh and Chicago. A detinning company in the Pittsburgh district sold 10,000 tons of scrap to an eastern Pennsylvania steelworks. At Chicago heavy melting steel advanced 50 cents, on brokers' purchases to cover commitments, and more active demand from foundries.

Storage rates on foreign pig iron at Boston have been reduced, leading to some fears of larger importations. Connellsville foundry and coke prices have been extended for fourth quarter.

Operations by Areas.

For the first time in months no district recorded a loss in steelworks operations last week. Chicago was up 4 to 26 per cent; Wheeling 5 to 31; Youngstown 2 to 28; New England 3 to 31; Pittsburgh 1 to 17. Detroit held at 77; eastern Pennsylvania 17; Cleveland 28, and Birmingham 25. For the third quarter, steel works operations averaged 23.7 per cent, compared with 50.9 in the second quarter, and 49.1 in the third quarter last year.

Iron and steel exports in August totaled 242,947 tons, up from 233,186 tons in July, and comparing with 119,374 tons in August, 1933.

Steel's iron and steel price composite is unchanged at $32.13; the finished steel composite remains $54, while the scrap index is up 9 cents to $9.42.

Radio Pictured As Great Asset For Education

Commercial Broadcasts Are Assailed Before Federal Body.

(Associated Press.)

Advantages of education by radio through noncommercial broadcasts were pictured yesterday for the Federal Communications Commission by representative educators. They criticized the character of some current commercial programs.

Opening two weeks of public hearings, the commission heard speakers for the National committee on education by radio, composed of representatives of nine National educational organizations, urge committee recommendations for the protection and extension of available broadcast facilities for educational broadcasters operating noncommercial stations.

Stressing the need for what he described as more wholesome radio entertainment and higher standards for commercial broadcasting generally, Dr. Joy E. Morgan, committee chairman, led the attack on the "American Plan" of broadcasting.

He represented many people as being "horrified" at the character of present-day porgrams, some of which, he said, "degrade and debauch children."

Dr. Arthur G. Crane, president of the University of Wyoming, reported a "growing public dissatisfaction" with some programs broadcast by National advertisers."

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — High Finance — By Harry J. Tuthill

WASN'T IT CHILLY LAST NIGHT? IT WON'T BE LONG UNTIL WE'LL BE STUFFING THAT FURNACE FULL OF COAL.
THE NEXT TIME THAT COAL COMPANY COLLECTOR COMES HERE WE'LL PAY HIM IN FULL AND ORDER HIM TO FILL UP OUR COAL BIN.

IF WE PAY THE COAL MAN WE'LL HAVE TO PUT OFF THE BUTCHER AGAIN. ALSO, THE LANDLORD'S FACE IS A SORT OF BRICK COLOR EVERY TIME HE ASKS ME WHEN WE'LL CATCH UP ON THE RENT. DO YOU REALIZE HOW MUCH WE OWE?
OUR CREDIT WAS PRACTICALLY OKAY UNTIL WE STARTED BELTING IT WITH THOSE PORTERHOUSE STEAKS AND TENDERLOINS FOR IKE.
THE AMBITION OF MY LIFE IS TO HAVE ENOUGH TO TELL SOME OF THOSE SNIPPY COLLECTORS WHO RING OUR BELL FOR HALF AN HOUR JUST WHAT I THINK OF THEM.
WE'LL GET ON OUR FEET AGAIN. BUSINESS IS FINDING OUT THERE'S NO NOURISHMENT IN LOOKING AT ONLY THE BLUE STRIPE IN THE RAINBOW.

Pluvius Interviewed.

I dreamed of interviewing J. Pluvius, the great, who seemed to be pursuing a course that people hate. I saw him, in my vision, reclining in the shade, beneath a palm elysian, and drinking lemonade. And while he thus was basking in indolence scarce sane, the folks below were asking, in wailing tones for rain. "Why don't you pull the lever that makes the waters dance?" I asked, in my endeavor to rouse him from his trance. "For years and years I've sweated," said Pluvius the grand, "to keep the world well wetted, to saturate the land. The farmers raised their clover, they raised their wheat and oats, and tickled pink all over, they fed their steers and shoats. Then all the lawns looked thrifty, the flowers were seldom killed, and all the trees were nifty, with prunes and loquats filled. The people, living brightly, with ample coin in banks, received their blessings lightly and seldom offered thanks. They heard the raindrops splatter on growing corn and green, and took it as a matter of every day routine. They had the well-filled river where thirsty cows might brood, but why should they deliver a slice of gratitude? Good fortune's bland caressings were with them every day, but they forgot their blessings, and growled the years away. But now they've had their lesson, their heedless mood is gone, and soon, as you are guessin', I'll turn the water on."

First Lady Honors Three Musicians

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 1 (AP). Autographed photographs of Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the President's wife, were presented here late yesterday to three mountain musicians who participated in a folk-song concert which the First Lady attended in Washington last April.

The presentation was made at an informal ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Winston Wilkerson here. President John L. Newcomb, of the University of Virginia, urged that the university be regarded as a center for Virginia folk music research and study.
